It is forbidden to know!

You came here and you think this is a strange place? Why Forbidden Psychology? The fact is that there is information that is forbidden to be known to an inhabitant of planet Earth.

You ask me how it is forbidden to know? What is happening, someone comes and forbids reading this material? It's hard to believe, but this is almost the case! The practice of the first edition of the site has shown that most people are not able to consciously go through the material to the end. I am not kidding!

IT IS FORBIDDEN TO KNOW THIS!

I have documented cognitive impairment and mental impairment in those who tried to read this. The following typical reactions were noted:

1. He read and immediately forgot. Distracted by something else.
2. He read and did not realize anything.
3. He read and immediately disappeared, as if turned off.
4. Refused to continue in the middle.
5. Inappropriate reactions, rudeness, unfounded accusations.
6. Symptoms of a mental disorder. Psychopathic reactions.

I specifically supervised one of the readers during the study. Warned him that he might shut down like a TV. At first he assured me that everything was fine with him, and he reads calmly. Then he began to fill me up with letters, I barely had time to answer. Then he began to send unexpected letters on completely extraneous topics, to be unreasonably offended, suddenly, unexpectedly, in parallel with the questions, he gave out what was saying goodbye to me. As if he had a split personality. I wrote to him that he lost control of himself, and he passed out like that, but he did not answer. What happened to him in the end, I do not know. He never came to me again.

REMEMBER THAT READING MAY BE DANGEROUS FOR YOU!

Something like this can happen to you unexpectedly for yourself.

It all seems like science fiction, but unfortunately, it turns out that all of this is actually happening.

WHAT IS WRITTEN HERE IS NOT A JOKE OR A STUPID PRANK!

If you find the strength to read the website to the end, you will be able to check everything yourself and see that this is reality.

Problems in the economy

You see them every day. All the time problems. The government endlessly takes measures to overcome the next crisis. You know, or remember, that once, back in the distant 1970s or 1980s, it was even good, and there was a boom in the economy, your country was a strong, great power. Then somehow ... Something began to happen. First stagnation for some reason, then everything became bad. And it got worse and worse. What happened after promised a lot, but in reality everything happened in a completely different way. Crime, corruption, embezzlement. A government that speaks a lot, different correct words, but in fact does nothing. Then it seemed to get better, stability came, but somewhere deep down you realize that this is all an illusion. Your country produces almost nothing, everything is imported from abroad. And if something is produced, then it almost entirely consists of imported parts. Or, in general, has a name familiar from childhood, but is released somewhere abroad. Maybe your country sometimes fights in local conflicts, but defeats only very weak opponents, otherwise it gets bogged down in the war, and begins to suffer heavy losses. You thought that your country's army is strong, and in the end you are surprised to understand that it is weak, armed with outdated weapons, and poorly trained. And new weapons are shown mainly at parades, and there are some strange problems with the mass introduction of these models all the time. It seems to be there, but ten years pass, then another ten, and you are surprised to find that they are still being tested. At the same time, you notice that the whole economy is striving for monopolization and the command and administrative system, although everyone knows that this is bad.

At first there are several competitors, sometimes even a lot of them, but over time, for some reason, there are fewer of them. It seems that for a strange reason they are losing interest, they are leaving this sector, they are selling the business. As a result, two or three almost monopolists remain, and their products become of average quality, and in reality they are produced somewhere in a third world country. No matter how many conversations there are, that this all harms the economy, that monopolists need to be fought, and the long hierarchy of officials generates a terrible bureaucracy and slows down everything, for a strange reason it turns out that they again exist and occupy a central place in the economy, while continuing to grow.

At the same time, you are surprised to notice that from year to year we drive the same cars, fly on almost the same planes as ten, twenty, thirty years ago. They only change a little externally, become equipped with electronics, which often do not understand what they are doing, or even lead to disasters. Remember the years 1940-50-60. First piston aircraft with propellers, then jet, then supersonic. It seemed that progress was moving rapidly. And then somehow ... Something ... At first there were four engines on civilian airliners, when one of them crashed, he could calmly continue the flight. And it was reliable. Then for some reason there were two of them. And on large planes, too, two. They are huge, but still two motors! They will tell you that this is to save fuel, there is still a lot of all kinds of electronics there. Alas, because of this, when one engine fails, the plane is forced to immediately go back, and this has become such a dangerous situation that pilots are given medals for such a feat! Still, such aircraft began to have a very small margin when entering off-design mode. Just a little, and they can get into a hopeless situation out of the blue. For this, a bunch of electronics has been installed to monitor this, which itself is already so complicated that it can cause a disaster. Trains run almost the same as 50 years ago. The wagons have become a bit more comfortable, and all the differences. Where are the super-modern expresses sweeping in pipelines with supersonic speeds? No. They talk a lot about this, again projects and ... nothing. We actually ride the same buses, trams and trolleybuses that 10, 20, 30, 40 years ago, they only became a little different. There was a lot of discussion about the engines of the future, hydrogen, electric. The output is practically nothing. Electric cars have appeared, but there are very few of them, they are expensive and complicated to operate, it is difficult to charge them. Toys for the rich. You can sometimes out of curiosity see futuristic pictures of the future, where trains raced through tunnels with a magnetic and air cushion. And the planes flew everywhere and at supersonic speeds, moreover, they could also go immediately beyond the atmosphere into space.

What happened to this future? Why didn't it come? Where is the promised artificial intelligence superior to human, where are the robots that replace humans in everything? They promise us, but they all are not. Where are breakthrough nano-technologies ready to turn the whole world upside down? Why is it all the time impassable difficulties, and everything looks the same as before? And even worse. Weaker, not so durable, flimsy, breaks quickly, constantly requires repair and replacement of parts? The most critical structural elements are often made of very flimsy materials, as if counting on breaking right away? I will tell you a secret. This is a regression that began in the 1970s of the last century, at first with stagnation in the 1980s, when new projects began, but did not reach implementation, they were thrown. Others began, and also threw. Tried to start abandoned again, and nothing. The recession began in the 1990s, and since then the series of crises has not stopped. It seems that the economy everywhere has become so weak that just a little, and begins to fall on its side. This condition is called decline.

If you look closely, but you may be surprised to see that they just can't finish what seems most necessary and obvious. They throw him all the time. They can't reach the end. Many times trying to do, and nothing. Leaders change all the time, and again the same thing. As a result, everyone forgets that they were expecting this at all. Even more interesting: what seems beautiful and convenient, suddenly, for some reason, is replaced by something extremely complex, artfully twisted, filled with errors, and it becomes completely inconvenient to use it. It seems that something happened to the manufacturer in the minds of the developers, and they tried to make it as difficult and inconvenient for you as possible. Sometimes it seems that the manufacturer specifically tries so that no one buys his products. You will suddenly be surprised to learn that there are analogues created by amateurs, which are much simpler, more logical and more convenient than what is done by eminent business people.

In the past, well-known companies that were famous for the quality of their products suddenly begin to hand over for no apparent reason. All less quality products made in the middle of nowhere, unknown by whom. Then you will be surprised to learn that part of this company no longer belongs to her, and then all of it no longer belongs to herself, only the sign used by unnamed manufacturers remains. And anyway, you don't even have any idea who developed and produced the product you bought. It is as if they are trying to deceive you by passing off an article made by an unknown person as a well-known manufacturer's product. Does that sound normal to you? Or is there something completely wrong? What becomes of them, with this famous manufacturers of great things in the past, who made us happy? People began to buy less? Less interested in product quality? Or what?

But that's not all! Entire developed countries, which in the past were the personification of scientific and technological progress, suddenly seem to lose interest in this. Their goods are gradually disappearing from the shelves, becoming less and less high-quality, and in the past eminent companies were suddenly sold to new owners abroad. The economy of these countries begins to turn in what is called stagnation, and gradually leaves the ranks of the advanced. It was as if someone had broken it from the inside, and there no one was interested in being the first in the world, seizing markets, or pushing out competitors. The shark of capitalism suddenly turns right before our eyes into a half-dead crucian. A new favorite breaks ahead, but after a while the same thing begins to happen to him in a strange way. It produces something, this country is a former leader, but less and less confident.

As if something is constantly hindering them all, but what?

Problems in science

So, you are sure that today science has achieved extraordinary heights. Stunning discoveries taking place with fanfare. We have already invaded the limits of quantum physics, discovered the laws of the development of the universe, caught the gravitational waves. It seems that we are rapidly moving forward ... But ... That's the trouble. Quantum physics was discovered at the beginning of the last century, and since then little has changed in it. Yes, there is a string theory, its problem is that it is not confirmed in any way, except for calculations. Think about what fundamental discoveries have radically changed your life over the past 20 years? The answer may surprise. None! Do you say GPS and cellular? This all appeared in the 1980s of the last century. Flat TVs? So this is also not news. Yes, there was a smartphone and a tablet computer. But these are good engineering developments based on the ideas of the last century. That's actually ... that's all.

And scientists are writing, writing ... Long rows of formulas. It makes a lasting impression! How smart they are! They've already considered the whole universe. There are fewer and fewer secrets in it. Let's look at this example how this all happens for them. Surely, you already know that our universe arose as a result of the Big Bang. This is already included in school books. At first it was believed that the explosion was in a vacuum, something like a point exploded, a huge bunch of matter, and stars and galaxies began to form in all directions. It was logical in its own way. But it turned out that in practice, everything does not look like that. It did not coincide with the observations. As a result, this provision was revised, now it is believed that initially not only matter, but also space-time, that is, vacuum, began to form from a point. Suddenly a lot, a lot of vacuum came out of nothing. It should be assumed that the vacuum then, it is also something like matter, and must somehow be formed. How did he do it and does it continuously? Where does he come from? But the horses had already been carried, and there was no way to stop.

The fundamental question is, was there a universe before the Big Bang? The answer of the cosmologists was. Was there space and time? The answer is there were none. How did the universe come about then? From quantum fluctuation. Where then could this quantum fluctuation occur if there was neither time nor space? That's all, there is no answer. We arrived! It turns out that it happened nowhere. But we didn't notice it? And after the Big Bang, quantum fluctuation and a new universe may again arise within our universe. And at least thousands of them. Right next to it. But for some reason did not arise. Well, we drove by. We look further, after the Big Bang, the universe began to expand rapidly. It needed a lot of energy, where did it come from? And out of nowhere. No energy is needed to expand the universe. She is already there. But like this. It is taken from the created matter. Something like this. Law of conservation? Well, what do we need such laws? Not a decree. We drove by again. Further, the universe began to expand rapidly. Very fast. So, directly, very fast. Because scientists so happened from their theories. This moment was called the theory of inflation. And what? The Universe took and began to expand abruptly, breaking the laws of physics. Therefore, the correct decision was made responsibly: at this moment, these laws of physics simply did not work! But like this. None worked. To fit into the theory, the universe expanded in leaps and bounds, according to its own laws, rejecting existing ones. A very convenient point of view, I must say. It resembles a circus trick when a rabbit suddenly appears in a magician in a cylinder. But all right, the universe expanded, first quarks appeared, then particles, and then matter. Matter itself began to take shape in stars and planets, then in galaxies. But there is trouble. It turned out that the universe continues to expand, and does so with acceleration! And it expands the vacuum, which either stretches from this, like an elastic band, or is formed from somewhere. In this case, no one has ever recorded how the vacuum expands, and does not even have a close idea of how such a process occurs. But who were interested in such trifles? The game has already gone! No need to pay attention to details! But how does the universe do this?

On this occasion, discovered the "dark energy". It has an interesting property to expand the universe just like that, without the necessary energy supply. And this energy itself is such. The fundamental discovery! You probably already heard about it. True, here is the trouble, no one has yet fixed the darkest energy. There are only indirect signs. And then, it seems, there is ... Or not ... But at such a solemn moment, is it necessary to pay attention to such trifles! Opening of the century! At the same time, they "discovered" and "dark matter". Nobody has yet explicitly fixed it either. It's convenient to open something by calling it dark. Dark means no one can determine and see in any way. But the opening took place! Now it is already believed that some galaxies are so rapidly moving away from us that they exceeded the speed of light. And this is normal, because they move away together with the expanding vacuum. But the question is, where do they go? All this happening where? Where was the universe originally in the form of a point, and then expanded to 90 billion light-years in diameter, and continues to expand further, more rapidly? Why is there so much space for this? You should not ask such questions to cosmologists! They call them "interesting" and do not answer. Why think about such things seriously? Just think, the universe has bloated, 90 billion light-years in diameter, and continues to swell! Who will it affect? After all, there is nobody and nothing there, not even space and time. There is nothing around our universe, but inside this "nothing" we swell the whole universe. After all, it has already been proved!

For example, redshift, indicating the uniform accelerated removal of all objects in the universe from each other. This is called the Hubble constant. And we are told that it is not the stars scattering in space, it is the vacuum that expands like a pie with raisins in the oven, where the stars and galaxies are raisins. But here's the trouble. If you imagine how this happens, it becomes clear that either the Hubble constant is not correct, it cannot be constant for all objects, or objects cannot move evenly away from each other in all directions. Because the end result is a ball-shaped expansion. The raisins in the pie don't do that! One raisin moves faster, the other slower. This is the geometry of the points of the expanding ball. They do not move away from each other at the same speed, measured in either direction. That is, the expanding universe is not a ball. What then? Ah ... hell knows. Doesn't matter, right? Maybe a torus, although this is not certain. Or something like a bucket. This is how it is now portrayed.

Ah ... it doesn't matter either. We drove past again. Wait, they will tell me at this moment. But what about relic radiation? It is discovered by scientists. Yes. But it comes from everywhere. Therefore, we are told that the universe did not have the epicenter of the Big Bang. He is at every point. Strange, the raisin pie has an approximate center, where it all began, but the universe does not. But that doesn't matter, does it? And do not ask cosmologists interesting questions, they still do not answer.

All of the above tells us that the Big Bang theory has long gone into insurmountable contradictions, and it is time to deal with fundamental issues, rather than run so far. Maybe everything really doesn't look right? And the universe is not really expanding, especially with acceleration? Maybe we just see some kind of illusion created by a change in the properties of space-time at great distances and vast intervals of time, it gives rise to such opinions. By and large, these issues should be addressed by philosophy; it has always dealt with this. But with its epistemology and phenomenology, it has already become the justification for any extravagant hypothesis. Therefore, the armored train of this theory cannot be stopped. Hundreds and thousands of theoreticians have been writing formulas on chalk boards for decades! They wrote, wrote, wrote, and came to a standstill. But then they just pretend that everything is in order. It's familiar, right? Therefore, in cosmology, one cannot criticize the Big Bang theory. It can be slightly corrected, but to say that it is fundamentally wrong is impossible! They will not answer in principle and will simply ignore the questions. The secret of the current situation is quite simple. There are about 10,000 astronomers in the world, and out of them, there are about 1,000 cosmologists in total. And you thought there were millions of them? This 1000 has come up with legends for us, developing one hypothesis more and more, completely ignoring the fact that no answers to the most fundamental questions have been found. And they are not at all embarrassed by the glaring contradictions in their constructions. The Big Bang Theory has long been designed for gullible simpletons who are not going to think about it with their own heads. And of course, they will not pay any attention to these inconsistencies. The main thing is to speak from the rostrum with pressure, quickly, as difficult as possible, so that no one has time to start thinking.

In fact, in basic science, almost everything is so designed that no one from the outside will try to figure it out. Therefore, you need to understand a simple thing.

SCIENCE TODAY IS ESSENTIAL DEAD!

Science is a corpse! These theories like the Big Bang, which upon first careful examination fall apart like a house of cards, are the tales of a dead man. But did you seriously believe that science is more powerful today than ever, and it is driven by millions of enthusiastic scientists? In reality, this is a miserable sight. It consists of scattered small groups of scientists with titles and awards, arrogant in their regalia, filled with self-conceit, which conflict with each other, and are desperately fighting for crumbs of financing. About promising new projects there is simply no question. Nobody is interested in anything. You go where you want and promote your ideas yourself, as you want, and where you want. If your point of view does not coincide with that prevailing in any group of inhabitants of this world, it immediately, without careful consideration, is declared as an alternative theory. An attempt to defend one's point of view comes across bias and professionally honed demagoguery. Therefore, strangers are immediately expelled from there. Otherwise, they, God forbid, take away the remnants of the already decreasing funding every year. The described state of things most closely resembles the swarming of microbes in a decaying corpse. They are evil because they feel bad. But how did it happen?

This is not particularly surprising. Once upon a time, in the era of the emergence of science, it was promoted by lone enthusiasts. It was easier for them. The basic laws of the surrounding reality could be understood, having the simplest set of tools and instruments available to a loner. Most often, these people made experiments on their own money, did not depend on anyone, and had their own opinions. The pursuit of science did not bring them income, they were enthusiasts who were sincerely interested in obtaining the truth about the world around them. Of course there was a debate, but no one could drive out science just like that, declaring the theory pseudoscientific, just because it does not coincide with the majority opinion. Scientists united in societies, it was possible to become their member, nothing more. It was possible not to become. But gradually, things were changing. The experiments became more and more complex and expensive, inaccessible to an enthusiastic researcher. So gradually, scientists began to largely depend on external financing, for example, magnates or large corporations, carrying out orders for them. The impetus was given during the world wars when science entered the service of the military industry. Since then, it has actually become a state structure. Scientists have already received ranks in a certain state hierarchy, state awards, and salaries for their research. At first, everything went well; in the 20th century, notable progress was made. But then this system began to slip. It was already entirely funded by the state or sometimes by private investors, and became completely dependent on their interest in themselves. A series of crises swept in the late XX - early XXI centuries, interest began to weaken. Especially to fundamental science. And in Russia, it has already fallen so much that to exist within this structure has become tantamount to a struggle for survival. This is how state science, which has essentially become ossified, does not accept other people's opinions and criticism from the outside. She can rightfully be called "official," although she hates being called that. She is no longer fighting for the scientific truth, she is interested in external financing of areas where someone else is surviving. Therefore, it became more profitable for her to hush up insurmountable contradictions, pretending that everything is in order, and hoping that someday they will somehow resolve themselves, or at least ignorance of most people will allow those involved to live to retirement.

You probably read, listened, looked, the same as I did, and didn't notice anything? And why? You recklessly believed that scientists would not deceive you, therefore you did not delve into the essence! That's what modern science has become, it is like in an old joke, seeing that the rails in front are over, it prefers to rotate the wheels, standing still and depicting to others that it is rushing forward.

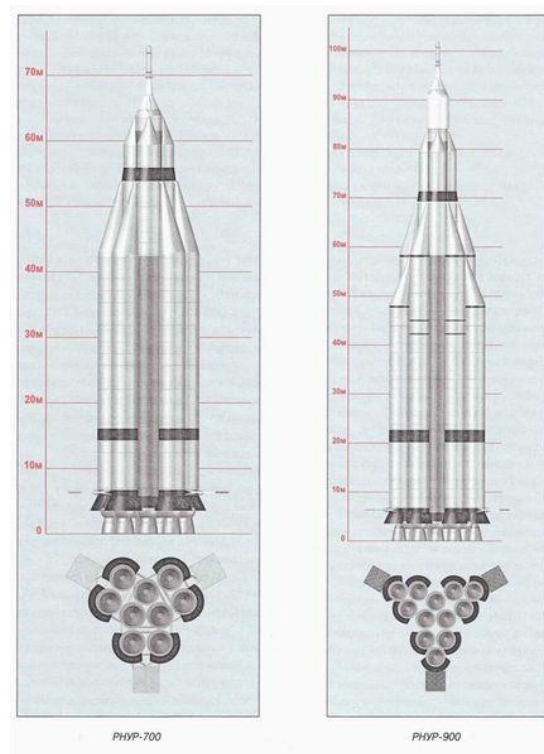

Problems in astronautics

So, you are sure that Russia is a leading space power. It puts into orbit satellites, manned spacecraft, and even space stations. Russia is going to fly to the moon, and then to Mars. In fact, the situation is slightly different. And you, most likely, guess about it. You are probably aware that the USSR launched the first satellite of the Earth into space, then the first man launched into space. In those years, he was noticeably ahead of the whole world in this direction. But then ... A strange thing started to happen. First, the USSR lost the US lunar race. The Apollo program has landed a man on our natural satellite. The USSR then limited itself to lunar rovers and lunar automatic stations, which made overflights and returned lunar soil. For many years it was denied that the Soviet Union was also going to send astronauts to the moon. It turns out he was going to. There was an N1 rocket, the lunar module was ready, even a squad of astronauts was assembled for the lunar program.

But the rocket turned out to be unsuccessful, regularly suffered accidents, the chief designer Sergey Pavlovich Korolev, who had a crushing authority in power, died unexpectedly. As a result, by the time almost everything was ready, the project was closed and the rocket was destroyed. The whole reserve was lost, except for the first-stage engine, which is still sometimes used on foreign missiles. Valentin Petrovich Glushko, who was the opponent of Korolev in the lunar project, actively participated in the defeat of the project. Since then, stagnation has begun. Station after station. "Salyut-1", "Salyut-2", "Salyut-3" ... Then "Mir", it seems like progress, you can connect the modules, but no, in the end it's almost the same. The same thing on TV all the time: astronauts fly on the Soyuz spacecraft to the station, then return by parachute. As a result, no one understood what they were doing there! They seemed to sit for a long time, and that's it! Where is the breakthrough? Where are the flights to Mars, the moon, other planets? Orbital stations look the same. And satellites. A lot of satellites. Almost all the satellites were called "Cosmos", go figure out what it does! Information for specialists. They are launched into orbit with the Proton heavy rocket and the Soyuz medium rocket. There was also a Zenit rocket, also of the middle class, but it did not participate in the manned program. Light rocket "Molnyia". And that's all! There were no projects and implementations of something more progressive? They were! The Chelomey Design Bureau designed the superheavy rocket UR-700 in addition to the UR-500 Proton, with characteristics no worse than the American Saturn-5, which was supposed to send the LK-700 ship to the moon.

They even worked out a variant of the UR-900 with a second-stage atomic engine sending astronauts to Mars, but ... these missiles were considered too dangerous due to toxic fuel. And the project was closed. It is interesting that the Proton is still flying on the same fuel. And with the Sergey Korolev N1 rocket did not work out. Also, for some reason. But then the people were waiting for this, that they were about to send astronauts to the moon, Mars, they would build lunar bases and orbital cities. Colorful illustrations in magazines of the time telling about how it would look. Television broadcasts, science fiction books and films. But no. Dull Soyuz and Salyut one by one. Not trying to do anything else? Tried! A new spacecraft was developed to replace the Soyuz, which was to be launched into orbit by the Zenit rocket. Did not take place. The project was closed. In parallel, work began on the domestic reusable ship "BOR" under the project Spiral.

The prototype has already flown, it remains a little and ... the project was closed. The remaining backlog from the BOR ship is now being used by the Americans as part of the Dream Chaser project. And this ship looks very similar to the former Soviet.

Maybe it will fly, but not at home. In short, they decided at the Soviet level, we need, like the Americans. Almost one to one. We are no worse! And, having abandoned all of their own, they began to make the ultra-expensive Energy-Buran project. No, they did it!

The Energia rocket was launched twice, both times successfully, once having launched the Buran spacecraft into orbit, an analogue of the American Shuttle, which successfully landed. It seemed a tremendous success, but ... everything. Even then, it became clear that the project is no longer interesting. Why ... perestroika, publicity. Ah, hell knows. Gorbachev decided so. The roof of the hangar fell on the last finished copy of the Energy rocket. No one had the idea of launching it with a payload! In this case, the ship Buran was killed. The remaining two finished copies of the ship were lying unattended until they were taken to museums. As a result, everything was closed, everyone was gouging, everyone was abandoned. Well, of course, Russian history began. There were many projects based on the Energia rocket, none of which took place. Not one decade they built the Angara rocket, in the end ... it does not fly. Either too expensive, or not done. They promised an analogue of the Zenit rocket to replace the Soyuz rocket, which they called the Soyuz-5.

But in general ... You yourself understand. In fact, it simply does not exist. They began to make a new reusable ship "Clipper", which even in the form of a model was taken abroad to the exhibition.

But ... it is clear that. A worthy place in the museum. Then they rushed to build a new ship, the Federation, an analogue of the American Orion, ours are no worse than them! Allegedly on the basis of widespread use, the backlog from the Clipper project, which in fact is not used at all, seems to be still being done. It seems to be. But under it, the Soyuz-5 rocket was planned, which is not there. In general, everything is clear. Again, all the same astronauts going to the Soyuz rocket, as they did 50 years ago.

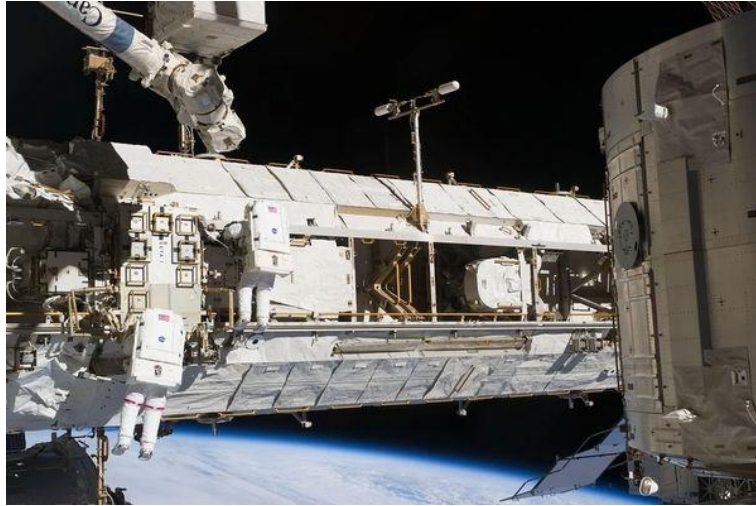

Perhaps the Americans were doing better? Alas. After the Apollo program ended, which not everyone understood, decided to invest in the Space Shuttle project.

It was built, and for a long time it worked properly. But disappointment was caused not only by the low safety of the ship: two of them crashed with the death of the crew, but the limitations of the program itself. She did not go beyond the low Earth orbit, and closed mainly on the operation of satellites. There were flights with the Spacelab orbital module, but they were one-off. Neither a new program for long-range interplanetary flights, nor its long-term space station. But they announced with fanfare the large-scale program "Constellation", which promised flights to the moon and asteroids, the creation of a "space frontier" from inhabited vehicles. At the exit from it there was almost nothing left. They made a manned ship "Orion", which flew so far in unmanned mode. And ... in 2011, Shuttle flights stopped. Moreover, recent expeditions on it due to the collapsed support infrastructure have become quite a risky business. Replaced by a logical nothing. America, proud of its breakthrough in landing a man on the moon, was left without its own transport spacecraft. This caused a feeling of national shame, so immediately began four projects of such ships: Ilon Mask's "Crew Dragon", "Starliner" from Boeing, "Dream Chaser" and "Orion". Fourfold reservation! But such a breakthrough would be appreciated in the Soyuz-Apollo era, not now. An ordinary ordinary transport ship for delivering astronauts into orbit is slightly better than "Soyuz".

In addition, a giant supership, "Starship," has been created with the ambitious goal of overtaking "Orion" in flight to the Moon, but due to a high accident rate, its future is questionable, and the cost is very high.

They will tell me, what about the ISS? This is a huge orbital station! Such a large-scale project! Joint with Russia!

Everything is simple. Initially, a permanent composition of 12 crew members was planned on it. And large-scale research. But then something went wrong. As a result, there are three cosmonauts sitting on one half of the station, and another three on the other, almost like on the "Salyuts" in Soviet times. All the same that was in the 1980s in the Soviet space program, all the same stagnation. Again, no one understands what they are doing there! Many times the question was raised, stop the ISS program as unnecessary, and nothing! As a result, it is by and large no longer interesting to anyone and is spending budget money on the space program. It seems that this is generally the pinnacle of the development of mankind, it's such a huge, era of stagnation, "Salyut" flying around the Earth, it is not clear why. And that's all. Further they are not capable of anything. It seems that they now want to build an orbital station around the moon. I would welcome such a breakthrough with applause, but somehow I already have little faith. Break off many times. All the time, it would seem to be held ... But for some reason, problems again. It is necessary to throw everything away and start over.

"Orion" was originally planned for lunar missions. Astronauts eventually fly to the ISS on the "Crew Dragon", a slightly more advanced spacecraft than the "Soyuz", but generally similar. The other two US orbital crew spacecraft projects have been abandoned.

Yeah, there is China with its great plans to land a man on the moon. But there's a problem. His manned space program is exactly repeating so far the USSR program of the 1980s. All the same "Salute", but called differently.

There is an edge question: where is the promise of this?

Okay, not to the stars, to the planets why not go? So much talk, and there's nothing to come out of. It's clear that it's difficult. It's clear that it's expensive. But before, somehow it didn't scare anyone. And did not stop. On the contrary, it seems to have spurred on! And now there is full realization that there is a deep stagnation from which no one can escape.

We finally come at all to the most important question often asked by ignorant people. Do we need a space program in general? Like, a human needs a human, and all that. In fact, of course, space exploration is an expensive and complex undertaking. And it is not always clear what is the specific benefit of this.

Firstly, it is an important and indicative symptom of the level of development of the people and the state. If there is a blockage in cosmonautics, then stagnation and decline in the state, which is very clearly seen on the example of the USSR.

Secondly, because space is interesting! On Earth, we have already visited everywhere, we have seen everything. And there are many things that none of us saw. You won't meet this here! After all, brave people conquered the mountains, other continents, the north and south poles. For some reason it used to be! And now for some reason it is not necessary.

Thirdly, the direct benefits of space exploration may not yet be obvious. It was the same with the Arctic north of Russia, for example. Enthusiasts sought to go there, sometimes they died, often in terrible conditions. And nothing! Few people understood then how this could be beneficial. Driving simple curiosity. Then it turned out that a direct passage through the Northern Sea Route is more profitable than around India and China, and it is strategically important for the country. And later it became clear that the shelf is full of oil. The same thing can happen with space. Now it is not obvious why this is necessary, just curious.

Fourth, resources on Earth will sooner or later be depleted. Ecology is already deteriorating, and it may someday turn out that there is no way to live on this planet anymore. It's necessary to relocate somewhere. But interstellar flights are a very difficult thing, and you have to start small, the sooner the greater the chance of success. In addition, there may be aliens with whom mutually beneficial contacts may arise.

But with this approach, it already seems that our civilization will not be able to go anywhere further than the Salyut program of various sizes. And there is simply no clear explanation for this.

Why no luck in love

Every man needs a woman. It's a given, with rare exceptions. Remember how you dreamed about it in your youth. You probably dreamed of meeting her, the most beautiful girl in your life, and she'd love you, then you'd start a happy family, have children. But reality has adjusted those plans a bit. Yes, there are strong, athletic guys who have everything going right in their relationships with women. But the average, intelligent guy with dreams of a loving girl unexpectedly has no luck. I mean, absolutely no luck. Yes, there are women who agree to date him, and even more, but he doesn't really like them. But with those he does like, nothing works out. They either ignore him, or they only date him to get something for themselves. And, naturally, they don't love him. But then, he finally meets someone he falls in love with. Sometimes it ends very badly, sometimes they have a relationship, but the ending is almost always the same. She leaves him. For a guy, this is usually a severe psychological blow. This pain sometimes lasts for years, and sometimes it lasts a lifetime, preventing him from building a fulfilling relationship with another woman. It seems strange that a woman doesn't appreciate being loved. After all, he'd do anything for her, even carry her in his arms! But no, that's exactly what's not needed.

The situation was so outrageous that an entire men's movement emerged to seriously address it. They uncovered something biologists have been silent about: the vestigial influence of relationships in the ape hierarchy of our distant ancestors. This theory was called ethology. It asserts that a female always seeks the dominant male in a troop, who provides the best genes for the survival of her offspring.

Therefore, a woman supposedly instinctively gravitates toward this type of male within the human hierarchy, choosing the most brutal one. And he, driven by his desire to become a leader and the abundance of female attention, often ignores these very things. Therefore, the winning strategy is supposedly to ignore a woman's interests, impose your own, and remain indifferent and callous toward her. But the average guy naturally notices that no matter how much he ignores women, they still remain indifferent to him. No matter how much he demonstrates his dominance skills, it doesn't generate any interest. And yet, he himself feels strange. If he's indifferent to her, then why does he need her? It reaches the point of absurdity: the guy ignores his crush, and she's not indifferent to him, until he himself begins to develop any serious feelings for her. And from that moment on, it's as if she switches off, becoming indifferent. She either constantly irritates him, or leaves him for another man altogether. It's a strange picture: to maintain a loving relationship with a woman, you have to not love her at all! Otherwise, she'll leave. After a while, the guy realizes that everything is very complicated, and not at all what he imagined in his youth. Some men ultimately give up on starting a family altogether and remain single. Others, of course, get married. And in marriage, an unpleasant surprise often awaits them. She becomes his wife, and it's as if the beautiful girl has been replaced. She becomes dissatisfied with her husband in literally everything. It's often simply impossible to please her. Too many gifts - bad, it upsets the balance of importance; not enough gifts - also bad, it means he didn't pay enough attention. You work little, you devote all your attention to her - bad! You need to be promising and strive for success, to improve yourself. You've lost the balance of importance again. You work hard, build a career, build your own business - bad again, you've completely forgotten about her. In any of these scenarios, the woman most often leaves her man and walks away, in a state of utter indifference; reaching an agreement or reconciling with her at that moment is impossible. Sometimes, very rarely, much later, the woman gets in touch with her ex-man, but only when he no longer needs her. Not before. And then only to find out how he still feels about her. And very rarely in this case, the relationship is restored. And the woman is not particularly eager for it.

From this we can conclude that women in modern times generally do not seek to build long-term, strong relationships with men. Moreover, men who have had extensive life experience are of the opinion that women do not seek relationships at all. Instead, feminist ideas are beginning to prevail, suggesting that one can get by without a man, that children are unnecessary, and that one should love oneself first. Birth rates are falling, and families are becoming short-lived, which often has a detrimental impact on the psyche of children living in single-parent homes. But how is it that in some underdeveloped countries, this seems to be a problem altogether? They live in poverty, yet the birth rate remains high, and families are stable. And these countries even suffer from overpopulation. Conversely, in the favorable conditions of developed countries, it is often impossible to extricate oneself from endlessly complex personal relationships. Nothing lasts, and nothing seems stable. A man often doesn't want to get married at all, and the woman seems only too happy about it; she's gone off on her own, living alone, sometimes with a child. And she doesn't need anyone.

Moreover, psychologists claim that you can make a woman fall in love with you and keep her if you're not only indifferent to her, but also actually bully her, exploiting her attachment to you. You deliberately create a problematic relationship. Everything turns out the opposite of how it should be. This resembles a form of madness, where most women act contrary to logic and common sense, often to their own detriment, deliberately ignoring and missing out on good things. On the contrary, everything in personal relationships is structured so that if you love someone, they almost certainly ignore you. Psychology usually explains this with a variety of different reasons. But the simplest explanation is that an idiot acts this way, to their own detriment.

One might assume that everything depends on the difficulties, but there's a well-known example: the birth rate collapse in Russia in the 1990s. Contrary to popular belief, it began precisely in the relatively calm, stable period of 1986-1987, back in the Soviet era, and was certainly not related to a deterioration in the financial situation; it remained roughly the same as in 1984-1985, just as the economy was on the upswing. And it was precisely this deterioration that had a profoundly negative impact on relationships: the birth rate dropped to a minimum, and relationships and marriages fell apart, whereas, according to the African scenario, they should have been strengthening. Many women during this period suddenly expressed a desire to pursue a career, build their own business, something they hadn't done before, and even claimed that they had previously been denied any happiness other than family. This greatly surprised men, who hadn't expected this from them, and hadn't seen anything like this before. On the contrary, in the USSR, women were always more protected and protected from hard work. As mentioned earlier, a significant crisis emerged in the economy, science, and gender relations in the 1980s. Afterward, everything changed radically, and relations became noticeably different. Many blame feminist ideas, but in the USSR in 1986, there was no mention of feminism, and both sexes were formally considered equal. So, once again, everything is turning out the opposite of what it should be.

We need to understand something simple. It's not normal for a woman to fail to appreciate love and care for herself, but instead to value relationships that are problematic for her! A cat knows how to appreciate love, a dog knows how to appreciate it, and they often become so attached to their owner that they wait for their owner after their death, and then die of grief.

Even extremely stupid creatures such as rabbits and chickens can appreciate love and care for themselves. A woman does not know how to appreciate! She not only never appreciates this, but, on the contrary, punishes her for that, and moreover, she instinctively seeks to be hurt.

Older men have probably noticed more than once that a woman in a marriage not only constantly creates problems in the relationship, but also constantly interferes! Just when you're sitting down and thinking about your problems-you're busy with work, fiddling around on the computer, reading - she suddenly has urgent matters that need to be discussed with you right now. And she won't leave you alone, no matter how you ask her. More often than not, such situations end in a fight. Whatever your passion, it turns out to be the wrong thing. Your passion is wrong; you need to be interested in something else, something completely uninteresting to you. More fights. You want to meet up with friends - that's absolutely wrong! Fights. Often, not only wives but also mothers do this. The man doesn't understand why, and more often than not, the woman herself can't explain it.

As they age, such women often begin to behave obnoxiously. They get in everyone's way. They drag huge, overstuffed carts behind them, knocking people over in the legs, and they themselves get in the way by moving slowly down the middle. At the store or at the checkout, such an older woman does everything extremely slowly. She stands in the aisle and takes a long time, looking at everyone and blocking the counter. She's confused, she has a ton of stuff, she spends a long time rearranging her things, rummaging through her purse, which she never takes out beforehand. And she seems to not care about anyone. Others are forced to wait for her and get angry. But she's old! They should wait out of politeness. In fact, she's not old. She's just instinctively in everyone's way. She gradually becomes like this throughout her life. That's the result. Of course, none of this is a reason to hate older people. They are often truly incapable of adequately assessing their own actions due to their age, but such behavior is very irritating to others.

A strange conclusion emerges from everything described here. It's as if women today have become fundamentally opposed to what men need. And to everything else, too. It's as if everything is reversed, and it's impossible to get along with them at all. Why is all this happening?

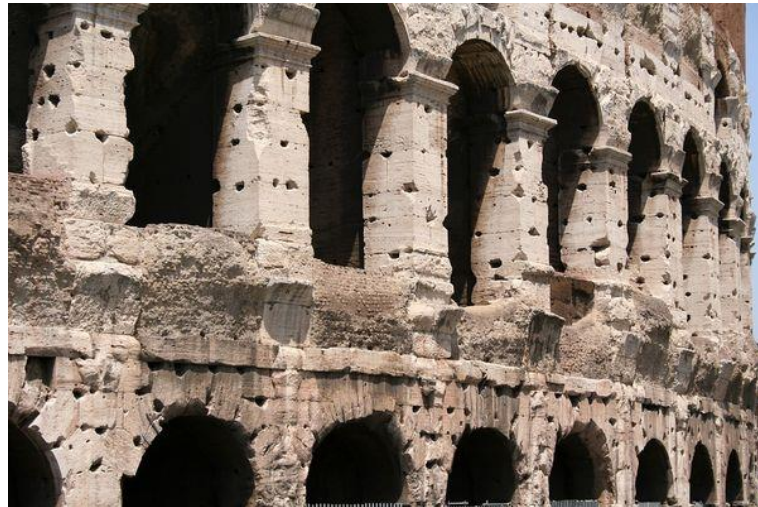

What does this lead to

For many, it seems incomprehensible, so what? Some minor problems. So what, that science will not be! So what, what a recession in the economy and in personal life! So what, that space. For free we do not need. As it collapsed, it will rise back. And everything will be taken again. From somewhere. Ah, no matter where. Always taken? Well, not at all. More than once in history it happened that civilization was retreating, and for a long time, plunging the whole world into barbarism.

The most typical example: the collapse of the Western Roman Empire. In 476 AD, the great empire fell. And it all happened in a very remarkable way. The Roman Empire experienced ups and downs, was repeatedly exposed to mortal danger, but each time survived. It was a republic, then it became an empire. It was ruled by emperors - geniuses, mediocrity, and even crazy. Nevertheless, she grew all the time, expanding her possessions. Rules almost all of Europe, part of Asia, Egypt, traded spices with India. Back in the early 400s, she seemed quite strong. Waged successful wars. But after the death of Emperor Theodosius, everything changed dramatically. The empire began to weaken. She could no longer resist the crowds of Germans settling on her territory. Strangers did not fight, but simply settled. Gradually, the empire was locked up in separate islets of its former territory, in large cities, and in the countryside, German leaders actually ruled. The power of the empire was nominally preserved. And then came the moment when the new tribes went on the offensive, and the last strongholds of the empire fell. All the former population, Roman citizens, were actually on the rights of slaves, second-class people among the conquerors. In some cities, traditions, even elements of the power of the former empire, were preserved for a long time, but they were a pure formality, and were not a serious force.

But how did this happen? Historians give us many reasons, from the Christian religion that has mastered the minds, introducing a defeatist psychology of non-resistance to evil, to the endless invasion of hostile tribes, which were not able to defend themselves. But these arguments do not stand up to serious criticism. Successful wars and crusades were waged under the banners of Christianity, and the Germanic tribes were nothing new, and even before they were satellites of a powerful neighbor. A careful examination of those events shows that at first the empire weakened from within. And this process began long before the end. It is noticeable even in architecture. The most complex majestic structures were once erected, but closer to the middle of our millennium traces of decline are noticeable. Buildings have become more primitive, not neat, less durable. As archaeologists say, at that time, most likely, many technologies of the past were already lost. Before the end, the country lost the patriotism of the population. No one wanted to serve in the Roman army, considering it a kind of slavery. The army was then huge, almost half a million people, but impoverished, poorly trained and poorly combat-ready. It was easier for residents to pay the required amount of money and not to join the army. With this money, the emperors hired the barbarian tribes, which served as the main fighting force of the late Romans. Contemporaries noted that many suggestions were made how to improve the combat efficiency of the army, in particular, equipping it with various mechanisms, but not one of them was implemented. Paradoxically, at that time the empire had all the information on how to assemble a steam engine, but then it was of no interest to anyone. And now the end has come. Chronists noted that the empire at that moment was falling apart literally in everything. Nothing worked anywhere. The result is natural, the population became slaves of the barbarians. After the sunset of the Roman Empire, no matter how bad it may be, the dark centuries of the Middle Ages, which are called so, began. Were lost or not used the achievements of science, culture, medicine of the era of antiquity. Europe plunged into the abyss of war and barbarism, from which it crawled with difficulty for almost 1000 years. The Western Roman Empire of the late period was actually a stronghold of civilization on the European continent. With its fall, civilization fell.

Comparison shows that this example is far from an isolated one in history. As is known from the history textbook, the first civilized states arose on the territory of Mesopotamia. And then what happened to them? They disappeared, leaving only monuments and archaeological artifacts. Further referred to Ancient Egypt. The once majestic state, able to build gigantic structures from huge stone boulders, was so dying closer to the beginning of our era that it was captured first by Alexander the Great and then by the Roman Empire. In fact, at that moment, it no longer remembered how it was able to build its pyramids, now archaeologists only build different hypotheses. All the achievements of the great ancient civilization in fact were lost as a result of decline. Further along the textbook is Ancient Greece. Having revealed the earliest examples of a just social system, developing science, culture, building beautiful buildings, having endured a series of wars between themselves and with powerful external opponents, by the time the Romans captured them, it was no longer a formidable force. First there was a pre-classical period, then a classic, then a decline and an end. Having replaced the Western Roman Empire as the stronghold of civilization, Byzantium managed to survive for a long time, but in the process still weakened, after which it was conquered by a strong more barbaric neighbor.

And this is far from the end of the list. Before Ancient Greece, oddly enough, developed ancient states already existed on the Asian continent. But then came the incomprehensible Catastrophe of the Bronze Age, and they all disappeared, pressed by the more warlike "Sea Peoples." And civilization at that moment again stopped, slipping into a primitive rural existence. The symptoms of this disaster are very similar to the decline of the Western Roman Empire. The wildest decline in population, depletion of metal deposits, famine, wars and epidemics, decline in trade and economy, decline of all social institutions. At the same time, neither religion nor customs helped to rectify the situation. When the "peoples of the sea" came, not a single kingdom developed in the past of that period, neither Hittite, nor Mycenaean, could offer them significant resistance. This is how one of the worst crises in human history began.

But what about other continents? In Africa, in addition to Egypt, it turns out that many states built pyramids, for example, in the territory of Sudan, the famous ancient civilization Kush, which also disappeared, did it. The rest of the peoples who had such technologies are not known to us. But it is believed that the cradle of civilization on Earth is Asia? Ancient pyramids, in addition to the most famous places, are surprisingly found in the Americas, on the territory of modern Indonesia. What unites these ancient builders, they all disappeared without a trace. Many people know the cave paintings of the Nazca plateau, but who painted them, what culture is unknown. She disappeared! Someone built the megalithic Stonehenge, already during the era of our era, and was completely lost in history. There are many such examples!

I will give the most exotic. Everyone knows about Easter Island.

But no one really understands how the indigenous population got there. It is believed that the aborigines sailed on rafts from the nearest South America. Thor Heyerdahl seems to have proved it by example. But considering it seriously is ridiculous. He clearly knew where he was sailing. He had a map, a compass, a walkie-talkie, and navigation devices to determine his location. It is foolish to assume that the brave sailors on the rafts set off at random into the open ocean, not knowing where they are sailing, not knowing the exact route and in general, that there is an island somewhere in the ocean. Together with families and chickens, they accidentally found this island and settled there. This story is more like a fairy tale. So you can come to Antarctica, just taking the wrong course. In addition, genetic studies have shown that Easter Island natives are closer to Polynesians than to South Americans. On the globe, Polynesia, the devil knows where, even further. The assumption that the ancient Polynesians found their way through thousands of kilometers of the stormy ocean on fragile reed boats, such they were brave, already seems like a naked fantasy. This requires more advanced ships, and knowledge of navigation in the open ocean. How did this happen? But very simple. This means that in the territory of ancient Polynesia then there was an ancient civilization unknown to us, the level of the Phoenicians or Egyptians. And this civilization was able to build such ships. There is nothing fantastic in it, except that it completely disappeared without a trace, leaving behind almost nothing but some mysterious structures. And not a single real image of their ships on which they crossed the ocean.

Then the population of Easter Island degraded, having completely lost the knowledge and skills of their ancestors, the Polynesians themselves also degraded, having lost their unique ancient culture.

So what? They will ask me. Some ancient problems. What does this have to do with us now? I noticed one important pattern. As soon as ancient civilization ceased to be barbaric, began to build a developed cultural community, it immediately began to weaken so much that it was destroyed by warlike neighbors. Often she disappeared without a trace. In our time, is everything wrong? Really? Everyone remembers how powerful the British Empire was until recently. She captured half the planet in her colonies, and ... weakened so much that they lost everything. Now it is a secondary state on the world stage, with a rather weak economy. Other European countries also owned the colonies, and the same outcome. The last colonies of France and Spain surrendered in the 20th century, with battle, but these last once powerful colonial empires could not oppose the rebellious much less developed local population. The Russian Empire also seemed powerful, which at the beginning of the 20th century not only lost its colonies, but also lost the World War, then disappeared from the map forever. The Soviet Power that replaced it was able to build a powerful state that managed to win the terrible World War, but in the peace period, showing an example of the brilliant development of science and technology, launching the first man into space, also weakened and ended its existence. Imperial Japan, almost defeating the mighty USA in World War II, losing the war, switched to world leadership in scientific and technological progress. And at first it worked brilliantly! And then ... Something went wrong. Not only is stagnation of one of the most powerful economies in the world, it is also the most difficult situation in the relations of the sexes, a demographic catastrophe. The United States also first pulled ahead of the first landing on the moon. Then somehow something ... with them became wrong. American goods were largely driven out of the shelves by Asian competitors. Now it's getting harder to buy something made in Japan or in the USA. Japanese and American, European goods first began to yield to Korean, and then Chinese. First South Korea pulled ahead, then China overtook it. China's economy seems to be the most powerful in the world, and the country is confidently moving forward. It seems to be. But there is no such certainty. Let's see what will become of him?

As you see, this pattern continues to be observed now. The state at the time of growth was usually evil and barbaric, cruel, stupid, constantly fought with its neighbors, but gradually began to become more and more peaceful. As soon as it began to live quietly, developing sciences and becoming cultural, suddenly and not always inexplicably began to grow. So it was, for example, in the history of the same China. In the 18th century, China was captured by the neighboring warlike Qing dynasty. Surprisingly, the new owners were not only not cruel, but the main goals in their reign established human happiness, health and longevity. The country stopped bloody civil wars, people lived happily, the population began to grow. Chinese filmmakers are very fond of portraying this period. But then everything began to weaken quickly enough. In the 19th century, it turned out that the European conquerors came, and for a strange reason, there was practically no one to defend China. The country surrendered almost without a fight.

The period of decline, bloody civil wars and disasters began. What happened again? Could it be the same with modern mighty China?

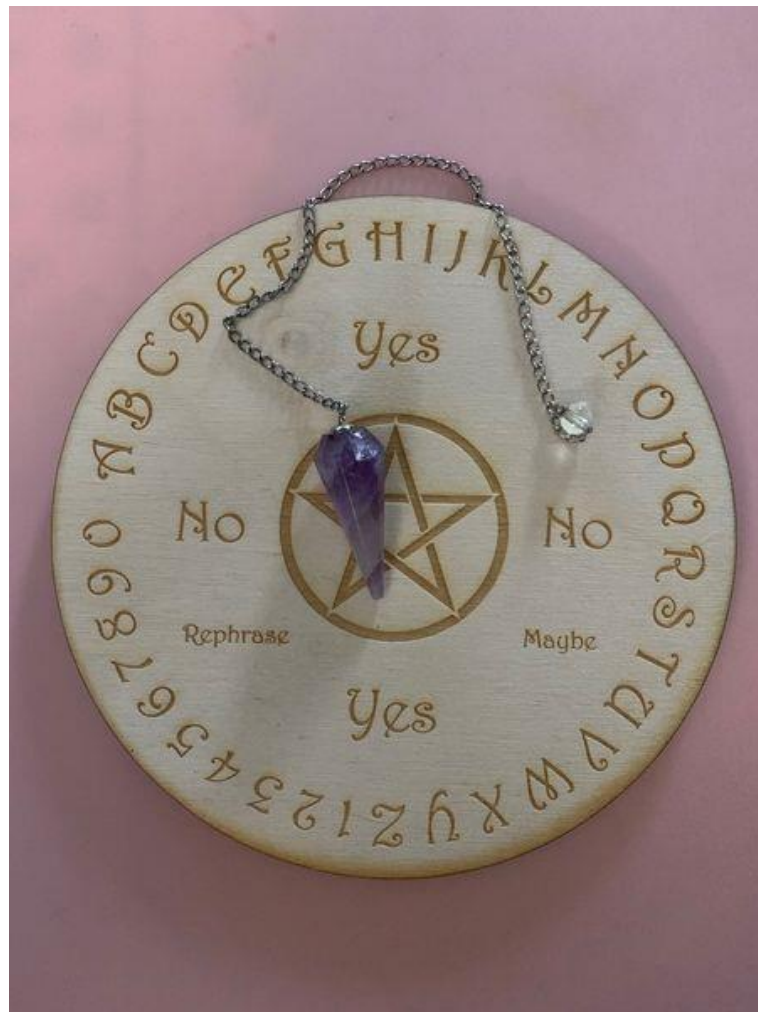

It seems that this can no longer happen. And nothing will die like this forever, having lost all its heritage, as in ancient times. It seems that modern Europe and the USA do not have a number of barbaric powerful enemies capable of capturing them. But in reality, everything happens completely wrong. Most often, the indigenous people are weakening, gradually losing their cohesion, their fertility is falling, and there comes a moment when they can no longer resist the new settlers. Now Europe and the United States are flooded with a stream of migrants from less developed countries. Against the background of a decline in the birth rate of the indigenous population, they will gradually begin to supplant the locals, seize the reins of government, and the moment will come when they will prevail. The scenario in this case may be similar to the one that has developed in South Africa. In the past of its terrible ruthless apartheid, the country resembled a European one. But Nelson Mandela canceled the damned apartheid, and now South Africa is a typical African state in which it is dangerous to live. The white population, Afrikaners, are being oppressed, there is talk of forced expropriation of their land without compensation.

Typically, historians give many different natural reasons for this. But it all looks, if put together, quite strange. As if really, it was only worth some nationality to rise, establish a peaceful existence, begin to develop science and culture, someone came from outer space and destroyed everything. It seems that behind all this lies some kind of gloomy and terrible secret. And as it becomes clear further, it seems I have figured it out.

Spiritualism

There are different opinions about this phenomenon. Everyone heard, and even about the fact that in the late XIX - early XX centuries, many were carried away by this occupation, trying in this way to make contact with deceased relatives. There were even demonstrations of experiments, of course, scammers, hoaxers, how could it be without it. As a result, they did not really achieve anything, and came to the conclusion that all this is nonsense. Abandoned. And to this day, the phenomenon is almost forgotten. It is believed that there is nothing at all. But somehow strange. It was, many tried, they talked with someone there, and now it turned out that this simply did not exist. Reminds an old joke: how so, the ass is, but there is no such word? Let's try to figure out a little what the phenomenon is.

The easiest way to become a medium, that is, a mediator in communication with the "other world", is a spiritual pendulum. It is known from antiquity.

As a spiritual pendulum, any cargo suspended on a thread or rope can be used. The medium takes in its hand the free end of the rope, and puts the weight down, holding it in a relaxed hand. So, now this subject can be given a task, and it will begin to swing. Or rotate. Ignorant people are so trying to check the quality of products and food. If you bring the pendulum to a product or food, it will begin to swing. It sways along, you can eat, across - it is undesirable. If you just walk with such a pendulum anywhere, you can find that it starts to swing in some places, and even rotates in a circle. I myself conducted experiments and made sure that a certain grid of squares was obtained, limited by these swings of the pendulum. But it does not coincide either with the geometry of the room, or with the sides of the horizon, or with the direction to the magnetic pole. In fact, it does not coincide with anything. It turns out that in this way it is possible to determine a certain coordinate network unknown to science. The next use of the pendulum is that it can answer simple questions. Yes - sways along, no - across. Moreover, these answers do not always coincide with the opinion of the person himself, which may cause surprise.

The next technique of spiritualism is dowsing. The simplest thing, known since ancient times, is to pick up a curved vine, stretch it with your hands so that the tree is in tension, and so walk on the ground.

It is believed that when there is treasure or water underground, the pointed edge of the vine should itself turn down. A modern way of dowsing is the use of two frames that are freely held in hands. The frames are bent corners of any wire, the material does not matter.

When the medium goes with two frames in its hands, if any anomaly is found underground, then they themselves must turn towards each other. I was shown this method while serving in the army in 1986. Yes, I confirm that it works, and I "discovered" a certain object underground, however, I did not understand which one, because no one was going to check it. The frames really seem to be turned towards each other by an unknown force. Previously, they often used this method when searching for underground sources of water and treasures, but it does not always give reliable evidence. Therefore, with the advent of more advanced methods of geological location, it has become obsolete.

The third technique of spiritualism, the most famous, is divination with a needle. A circle is drawn on paper, the letters of the alphabet are arranged around the perimeter, and to simplify the answer - the words "Yes" and "No". The needle point is placed in the center of the circle, a thread is threaded into the eye of the needle. The thread is held in a relaxed hand, so that the needle is at an angle, like an arrow, and it starts to rotate itself, collecting from the letters of the word.

I myself checked this method, it works. My friends and their wives also checked in their young years. The result - we sought some answers. But in general, there was one general impression: there was little sense in these experiments. Information is extremely limited and unreliable. Therefore, everyone was skeptical.

A variation of this divination is a spiritualistic board. It can even be bought ready-made at the store. The medium holds a pointer in its hands, which itself moves along the board. And collects words from letters.

The reliability of this method is not higher than that of others, but almost all have tried. At the same time, as I guess, no one ever attaches serious significance to this phenomenon. Rather, you can play "horror stories". As adults, we often forget about this experience, as about children's fun. Well, this plot is also used in horror films in order to communicate horrible omens, this board also works there itself, without the participation of a medium, it just does not fly and does not hit on the head.

And finally, the most advanced way is automatic writing. The medium holds a pencil or fountain pen in her hand, without any effort, and she herself begins to write words and sentences. Previously, this method was used in psychiatry to identify "unconscious motives", but then abandoned.

There are even more exotic group methods of spiritualism, but we will not consider them here.

The science of this phenomenon is expressed critically and very succinctly. This is an ideomotor act, a derivative of the subconscious. The hand of the medium itself makes involuntary movements, activating a spiritualistic tool, working in this case as a pointer. Formally correct. Without the participation of the medium, nothing will move by itself. But on this, in fact, they threw it. The Soviet government, with the help of Friedrich Engels, completely debunked and defeated spiritualism as superstition. Well, really, why study something? The head is dark and all that. Therefore, no one is interested in this phenomenon now, fun, nothing more.

But I understood a simple thing. After all, they overlooked the phenomenon itself. Yes, as many would probably object to me, it is unreliable, and rather resembles an accidental guess. But this does not mean that it does not exist! He just tells us some information that we most likely misinterpret. You can compare this state of affairs with a device with an arrow, on the scale of which nothing is written. We did something, the arrow deviated, but what it shows us and in what units of measurement is not clear. Moreover, the criterion for scientific interest is that it often gives answers that do not coincide with the personal opinion of a person acting as a medium. The arrow deviates when we ourselves do not expect this.

WITH THE HELP OF SPIRITUAL PRACTICES, YOU CAN GET INFORMATION THAT PEOPLE THEMSELVES DO NOT KNOW.

Who are the spirits

The superstitions of our distant ancestors inhabited the entire surrounding world with "spirits". They lived in trees, water, stones. A specially trained person, a shaman, was appointed to communicate with them. He became a medium for communication with the other world. Later superstitions divided the spirits into evil and good, which, respectively, harmed people or helped.

Currently, there is a superstition that there are "domestic spirits" that surround a person, and then "the other world", where evil and good incorporeal creatures of varying degrees of power live, which can both help and harm people. "Home perfume" must help by definition, and they can find out something about your fate, personal life and even find out a forecast for the future. Sometimes evil spirits enter the body, and then a person becomes obsessed. They can be driven out with the help of special ceremonies, which the shaman used to do, knocking on a ritual tambourine. Now the only available method of communicating with spirits is spiritualism. As we mentioned in the last chapter, spiritualism is scientifically explained by psychic automatism and an ideomotor act.

But in the literature of the 19th and early 20th centuries, strange things can be read. Entire spiritualistic societies arose that communicated with spirits, almost on a professional level. Moreover, the sessions are described during which ideomotor acts informed mediums quite complex things. All this can be considered falsification. But quite famous people were seriously carried away by spiritualism. For example, writer Arthur Conan-Doyle, author of Sherlock Holmes Notes. It is difficult to find this respected gentleman as a distributor of fakes. Emanuel Swedenborg's earlier experience of "contacts of the third kind" is also known, who honestly admitted that he communicated with spirits, and based on this experience he wrote several books, in particular, the most famous "On Heaven, the Spirit World and Hell". I will not comment on this work here, I will only point out that this man was at one time a famous scientist and theosophist who is difficult to suspect of primitive deception. Not everyone knows that the theory of the origin of species, known as Darwin's theory, was developed by him in collaboration with the naturalist Alfred Russell Wallace. The latter was made aware that there is a phenomenon of spiritualism that may cast doubt on its conclusions. And he decided to check it himself. And, it seems, he ran into a stump in this. As a result, he began to deny natural selection as the only driving force of evolution, and recognized the presence of spiritual rational power. Therefore, in the history of the creation of the theory of evolution, he is usually not mentioned as the founder. Here it can be noted that hardly an ideomotor act could make such an indelible impression on such a serious person. From all this, we can assume that in those days, researchers were faced with more complex phenomena than just mental automatism.

But what is everyone thinking now? Most people believe that nothing of the sort exists.

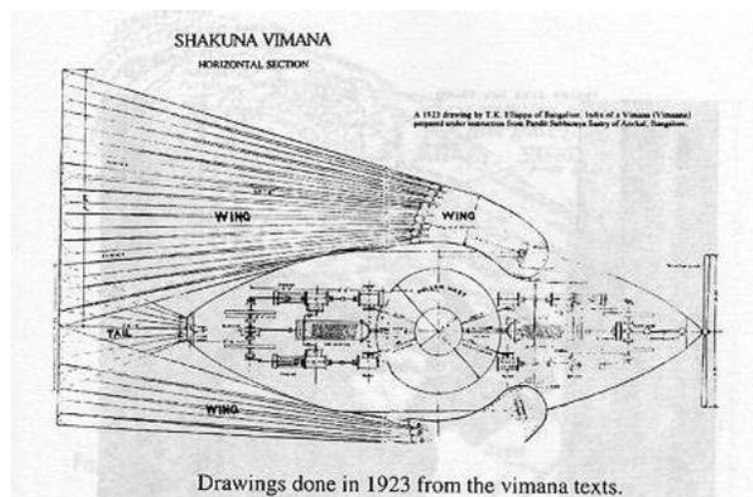

The rest believe that there is something bad, and it is better not to go there. But even the primitive attempts of spiritualistic sessions at the initial level show that in this way it is possible to obtain some more complex structured information than just "yes" or "no". Moreover, from the history of the study of this phenomenon, when it was still popular, it is known that someone who appears to be a dead person comes into contact with a medium and can even report information about himself. For example, details of his life, address, name under which he lived. Moreover, most often, verification showed that they did not coincide with reality. The creators of fakes and charlatans then ruined the research. They began to conduct many fraudulent "sessions", at which they were often exposed. Therefore, in general, the phenomenon was announced by contemporaries quackery. In pre-revolutionary Russia, the study of the phenomenon of spiritualism was entrusted to a commission led by Dmitry Ivanovich Mendeleev. He was very skeptical of the phenomenon, so he successfully "exposed" it. As you might guess, not particularly deeply understanding.

Spiritism reached its peak in the late Middle Ages and the Renaissance, when alchemists took up it. They even studied the language of "spirits", compiled dictionaries, tried to understand the meaning of what was told to them "from above".

As a result, a lot of completely incomprehensible instructions, recipes, texts, drawings, some of which are encrypted, have an allegorical character. Therefore, we can conclude that none of those who studied this phenomenon at that time found in it either real answers or recipes suitable for embodiment. Again, some nonsense. But they were learning something! Not an empty place. Where did this information come from? They all have one common quality, as if they were not intended for our world, but taken from some other. In our reality, they simply do not work.

One of the interesting phenomena of spiritualism is the receipt in the 20th century by an Indian medium, by means of automatic writing, of a description of the ancient aircraft "vimaana". Based on this, the work of Vaimanika Shastra was published. It provides a detailed description of aircraft with drawings.

This device has one significant problem: it cannot work here. Engineers from the Indian National Institute came to the conclusion that vimans cannot fly, and are the result of ignorant fabrications. Again, some nonsense! Does this mean that the Indian medium prepared the falsification? May be. But most likely, he really got this information from somewhere. And in this case, the ideomotor act informed him not only complex engineering information, but also helped to draw up the drawings.

If the "spirits" make predictions of the future, then most often they do not come true. Sometimes, completely according to probability theory. Now, they report from the astral, this will happen tomorrow, today, right now, but in the end nothing happens. From this, many mystics have made the completely incorrect conclusion that we simply do not understand them, and "tomorrow", for example, actually means "north".

Everything as a whole allows us to conclude that, with the help of spiritualism, one can get not only simple information, but also more complex information, including pseudo-scientific and technical information. After all, is someone coming up with it? At the same time, it seems to be some otherworldly being, the soul of a deceased person, and supposedly many different contacts can come into their contact. And each time the information thus obtained is not applicable in real life. What is this phenomenon? It turns out interesting ideomotor act, which is capable of such complex fantasies! Moreover, he is lying all the time. Endless deception, in communication with some invisible interlocutors, intelligent enough to compose complex technical products that are not really working. And who never tell the truth, who they are. And in general, they never tell the truth. So who are they? The conclusion is simple.

SPIRITS - ENEMIES TO PEOPLE!

Therefore, they always lie about everything. However, they have direct contact with human consciousness, which allows the occurrence of phenomena of mental automatism. There are no friends among them. This is just an imposed illusion based on deception.

Where is the astral

So, we now suspect that mankind has come across a not entirely clear phenomenon many times when unknown creatures respond to it through spiritualistic practices, moreover, they are not only rational, but can also create complex fantasies, appear to be non-existent people or incorporeal creatures living somewhere. But where are they located? This place is called the astral among the spiritualists. But further opinions about him differ and do not contain anything specific. It is assumed that there are some other worlds, other dimensions, energy-informational fields, and in them a person is present only as part, and specially trained people, called mediums, are able to dive deeper.

This riddle has worried humanity for millennia. Many are sure that there can exist after death. In the form of a certain astral being, among other astral beings. If a person wants to talk with such a creature, it can come closer to him from the astral. And in general, a person in his life is constantly surrounded by millions of invisible creatures, good and evil, with whom he is able to subconsciously come into contact and who can influence him.

The problem here is that neither parallel measurements nor energy-information fields have been scientifically established. Moreover, science has pushed the boundaries of our universe so that it is impossible to reach a person from it. Around and above his head there is an earthly atmosphere, even higher there is a vacuum where there is nothing of the kind, beneath him there is an earthly crust, which was already drilled a kilometer inland, and nothing was found. Therefore, most scientists mockingly regard the idea of astral as superstition. But what does this turn out to be, the phenomenon exists, many have come across it many times, and it is placed nowhere? A typical state for modern science, it cannot answer a simple question, therefore it denies the phenomenon itself.

When a person engages in spiritualistic practices, he holds in his hands some object. And this item begins to make movements as if against his willpower. If this item is placed in close proximity to a person who will not touch it in any way, then it will not move. In movies and literature, cases are described when knocks are heard in the room where the seance is held, objects move by themselves, doors are slammed, and then they cannot be opened. Over the past years, I have come across many things that can greatly surprise, but have never noticed anything like it. Therefore, I can definitely say: this is all fiction. Nothing ever happens around a person. In old wooden houses there may be creaks and rustles caused by natural causes, but this is not connected with the phenomena of spiritualism. From this follows a simple conclusion: someone moves spiritual instruments, someone swings the pendulum, someone turns the frame, someone writes on paper with a pen. Moreover, he himself is not felt, but he is not outside the human body. So this is someone inside!

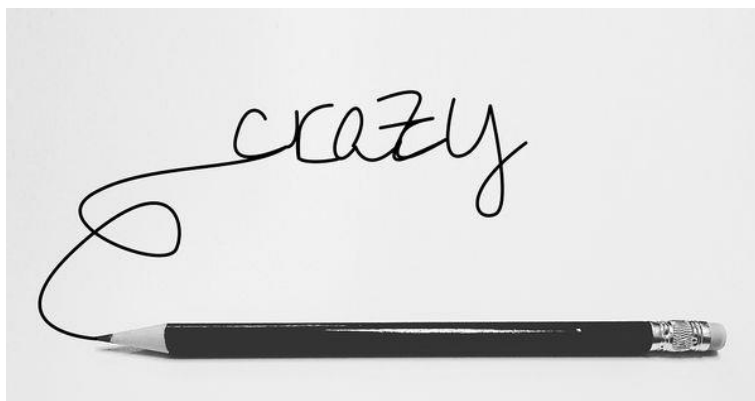

ASTRAL IS IN A HUMAN HEAD!

One can easily guess that this is just parallel thinking, like a second person in the same body who performs these manipulations with the same hand, seeing, for example, the letters on the circle with the same eyes. This point of view does not contradict the scientific one, but our science has limited itself to psychic automatisms and completely overlooked the rational nature of this phenomenon and its independence from the consciousness of man himself! It turns out that these someone, "spirits," are sitting in the same head. And what are they doing there? As we understood from the last chapter, they are enemies, they lie all the time and are confusing. How does this happen? Everything is very simple - this astral is the enemy of mankind.

For centuries, people have been trying to find something positive in it. And nothing was clear. It seems that "higher forces" exist, but terrible atrocities are happening on Earth, from which a person is forced to climb out himself. There were many theories and doctrines that basically agreed that there is a constant struggle between good and evil, and these opposites are somewhere in the same astral plane. No one really understands how they didn't fight at the same time. And again it does not converge. This positive force is not visible. It is as if she never intervenes in anything. In any disaster, it seems to be absent altogether. Millions of attempts to explain this situation, millions of excuses for inaction from above. And still it looks unconvincing. But if you start to think the other way around, that these forces are only hostile, and spoil everything everywhere, then immediately everything falls into place. You can easily notice many seemingly illogical events when everything around falls apart for no apparent reason. I wrote about all this in the first chapters.

ASTRAL HARM ONLY.

But how is it that there are someone in the human head who is only harming? Psychiatrists will immediately find the answer to this question. This is a mental disorder. You are sick.

Everyone knows that voices in the head are bad. A person is mentally ill and needs treatment. If voices are talking to you, then you're crazy. So, is the astral just a mental disorder? And are all these creatures the fruit of a sick imagination? In fact, the contradiction in this only seems. There must be craziness in the astral! All is correct. And later I will explain why.

ASTRAL IS MADNESS.

Therefore, all recipes and schemes from there never work in practice, and predictions do not come true.

Schizophrenia

Schizophrenia is the most common diagnosis that psychiatrists make for almost any reason. Any mental disorder that cannot be classified is declared schizophrenia. It has already been divided into many varieties. Hebephrenic, paranoid, simple, sluggish ... In appearance, a person who is sick with schizophrenia may look more or less normal. But he is tormented by hallucinations, auditory and visual, tactile, confusion, the patient becomes closed, inactive, aggressive, in a severe form quickly degrades, loses interests, hobbies, and even the ability to serve himself. It seems that everything is simple and the answer is found. "Spirits" is a mental disorder, most likely schizophrenia.

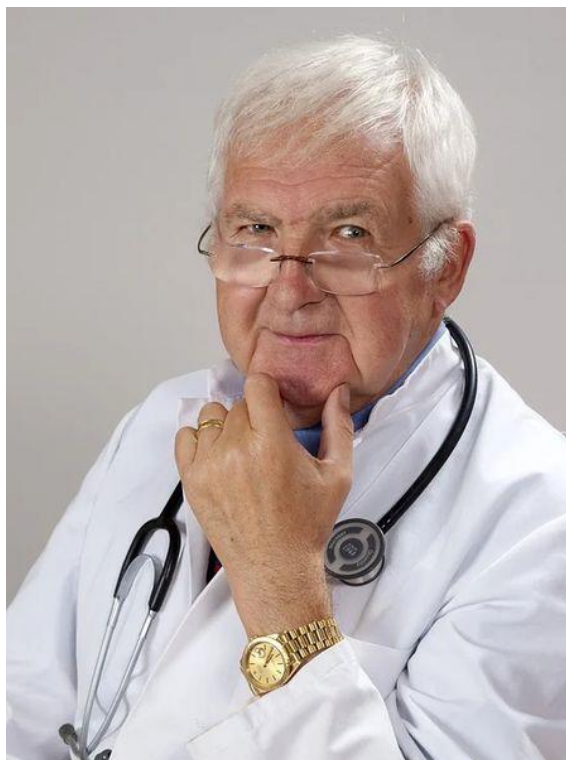

But after all, most people who decided to engage in spiritualism did not feel sick at that time? And came into contact with something, which is essentially crazy. At the same time, the craziness is, as we found out, in the same consciousness, but, despite its disordered thinking, it knows how to invent complex things, skillfully lie, understand questions and consciously answer them. It seems that having someone crazy doesn't bother him.

Dealing with what modern medicine knows about schizophrenia, I was amazed at the myopia of those who were involved in this. It seems that they all focused only on the classification of the varieties of this disease, and did not think at all over the question, what is this phenomenon at all? Where and why do hallucinations come from, for example, "voices in the head"? Why and how does delirium arise, especially fantastic, when a person often sees himself as a participant in some interstellar expedition, a paratrooper on another planet, a participant in the war with aliens? How and why do pseudo-hallucinations arise, reminiscent of dreams in a state of wakefulness, but they are conscious, and often add up to a whole story with philosophical overtones? All of this is being attributed by psychiatry to the illusions of a sick imagination. And the "voice in the head" is also an illusion, like everything else that often scares and surprises the patient himself. Paradoxically, doctors come up with all sorts of strange explanations that these are "loops in the mind", but for some reason it never occurred to anyone that such phenomena are generated by a completely separate, independent part of the brain that has its own thinking and fantasies. And that all these symptoms are a disorder of "parallel" consciousness, of that same "second person" who is just carrying out ideomotor acts during spiritualism. At the same time, the consciousness of the person himself can be relatively preserved, such symptoms simply interfere with him.

This state of affairs is very reminiscent of what was in microbiology before the discoveries of Pasteur and Koch. Microbes were seen through a microscope, but biologists were only engaged in classification, almost no one, with a few exceptions, had the idea that it was an infection! And at this time, people continued to get sick and die, often whole cities and countries, continents.

What explanations for the symptoms of schizophrenia do psychiatry give us? Surprisingly, no explanation. Generally.

Schizophrenia is considered a mysterious disease, but psychiatrists deny the possibility that auditory hallucinations can be generated by separate independent branches of thought. In the hands of psychiatrists, it seems, all the facts to guess that the human consciousness is not unitary, but consists of several relatively independent personalities, but no! They cannot in any way depart from the almost medieval postulate that consciousness is singular, and all that surrounds it is "unconscious". Imagine, there are even scientific conclusions that thought is formed first in the subconscious, and then it enters the human mind, with some delay. And there, in the subconscious, only the "unconscious"! There is such an obscure disease as multiple personality disorder. A person cannot say who he is. He is one, then another, then a third. And all these personalities are different! It would be strange to assume that they suddenly appeared out of nowhere as a result of a mental disorder. But psychiatry thinks so. Imagine that on your computer, suddenly, out of nowhere, several additional screens appeared on which there are programs that you never installed! And they are radically different from each other and from those with which you usually worked on the main screen. You will probably be surprised? There is nothing surprising for psychiatry. But in science such situations, when simple facts cannot be connected together, are by no means uncommon.

Back in 1976, Julian Jaynes put forward the theory of "bicameral mind". What he talked about in the book "The Origin of Consciousness in the Process of the Collapse of the Bicameral Mind". There was common sense in this theory, and some scholars supported it. In the end, it was not refuted, although historical assumptions were not confirmed, but since then it has simply been forgotten. Also a typical story for science. Better no explanation than some.

Thus, we can naturally assume that the phenomenon of mental disorder, such as schizophrenia, and spiritualism are related. "Spirits" constantly give us false information, give erroneous forecasts, and often clearly contradicting the very usual logic, they lie about themselves. The spiritualistic pendulum and the vine often show incomprehensibly what. At the same time, communication with this "other world" remains coherent, and most often does not resemble delirium. For centuries, people have been trying to make sense of what "spirits" say, they seemed to know something that a person himself does not know. And indeed, sometimes this secret knowledge erupted, in the form of revelations, when someone described other worlds to a person, moreover, in detail and, it seems, reasonably. On the basis of this, books were written, mystical teachings were created. But there was always a dead end behind them all. Anyone who dared to try to understand thoroughly, sooner or later rested on the fact that this knowledge was ending, in a strange way, giving him the feeling that there was nothing further. Or completely at odds with reality. As a result, everything that researchers learned in this way became meaningless. Is it not a strange phenomenon when something complex and seemingly endowed with a mysterious meaning, in the process of research, later degenerated into something completely unnecessary, devoid of connected content? There were many attempts, and they all ended in almost nothing, or the person himself later began to think up this meaning, creating a new mystical teaching. In fact, it is easy to assume that such an outcome is precisely caused by craziness, in the area where schizophrenia usually occurs, with delirium and hallucinations. Only in a healthy person the thinking of this part of his consciousness is not so upset as in a seriously mentally ill person. Therefore, it generates such strange information that does not coincide with reality.

BETWEEN COMMUNICATION WITH SPIRITS AND MENTAL DISORDER THERE IS A DIRECT RELATIONSHIP.

I will say an even stranger thing, it should be so. The result of all this secret knowledge should be a dead end! And the madness there is just a completely working condition. Schizophrenia, as a disease of the entire human consciousness, is an extreme manifestation of such a state of "parallel thinking", an already unscheduled regime.

How consciousness works

As stated earlier, human consciousness contains strange elements located where the "unconscious" is typically thought to reside, the chaos of primitive instincts. These elements are relatively conscious, but strangely appear as non-existent characters who supposedly died, but then turn out to have never lived, or as aliens, or as higher beings. And they lie all the time, often inventing complex, unusual things.

How can this be explained? Modern neurobiology believes that human consciousness consists of modules exchanging data through nerve nodes (hubs). Each module performs certain functions, but their exact division and location is still unknown. One can make a simple conclusion that spirits, angels, demons, gods, "voices in the head" are not actually illusions, as is mistakenly believed, but separate independent modules of the brain. At the same time, the fact that they allegedly talk to a person is just an illusion. In fact, this is an exchange of thoughts between modules through nodes, which in a state of brain overstrain or partial failure is perceived as "voices".

So, how does consciousness actually work? Long-term observations over more than 20 years have allowed me to create a hypothetical picture of the structure of human consciousness. It is very different from what is usually imagined.

The main consciousness of a person, his personality, which he perceives as "I", consists of two modules, located mainly in the left hemisphere, which is implied by the left-hemispheric orientation. One of them, perceived more than the other as a personal "I", is most likely responsible for logic. The second, closer to the back of the skull, is responsible for character traits and speech. This is a person's "second personality", or his "inner voice". When a person talks to himself, he most often communicates with his "second personality", which can have a partially independent opinion, but works in close connection with the first. In this case, a person most often mentally asks himself questions, but answers himself with his voice. Most likely, the exchange through the node connecting these two modules is possible only in one direction. Or something interferes with the reverse flow of information. All this makes up the person himself, his main consciousness.

When a person talks to himself out loud, the information is transmitted directly between the main modules of consciousness. If he thinks silently, the conversation with himself occurs with the participation of the right hemisphere. In this case, the right hemisphere can complement the idea that comes from the usually inaccessible consciousness, and it will be perceived as his own. Therefore, a patient with schizophrenia often talks to himself out loud, his inaccessible part of consciousness in the right hemisphere of the brain functions incorrectly, preventing him from thinking silently.

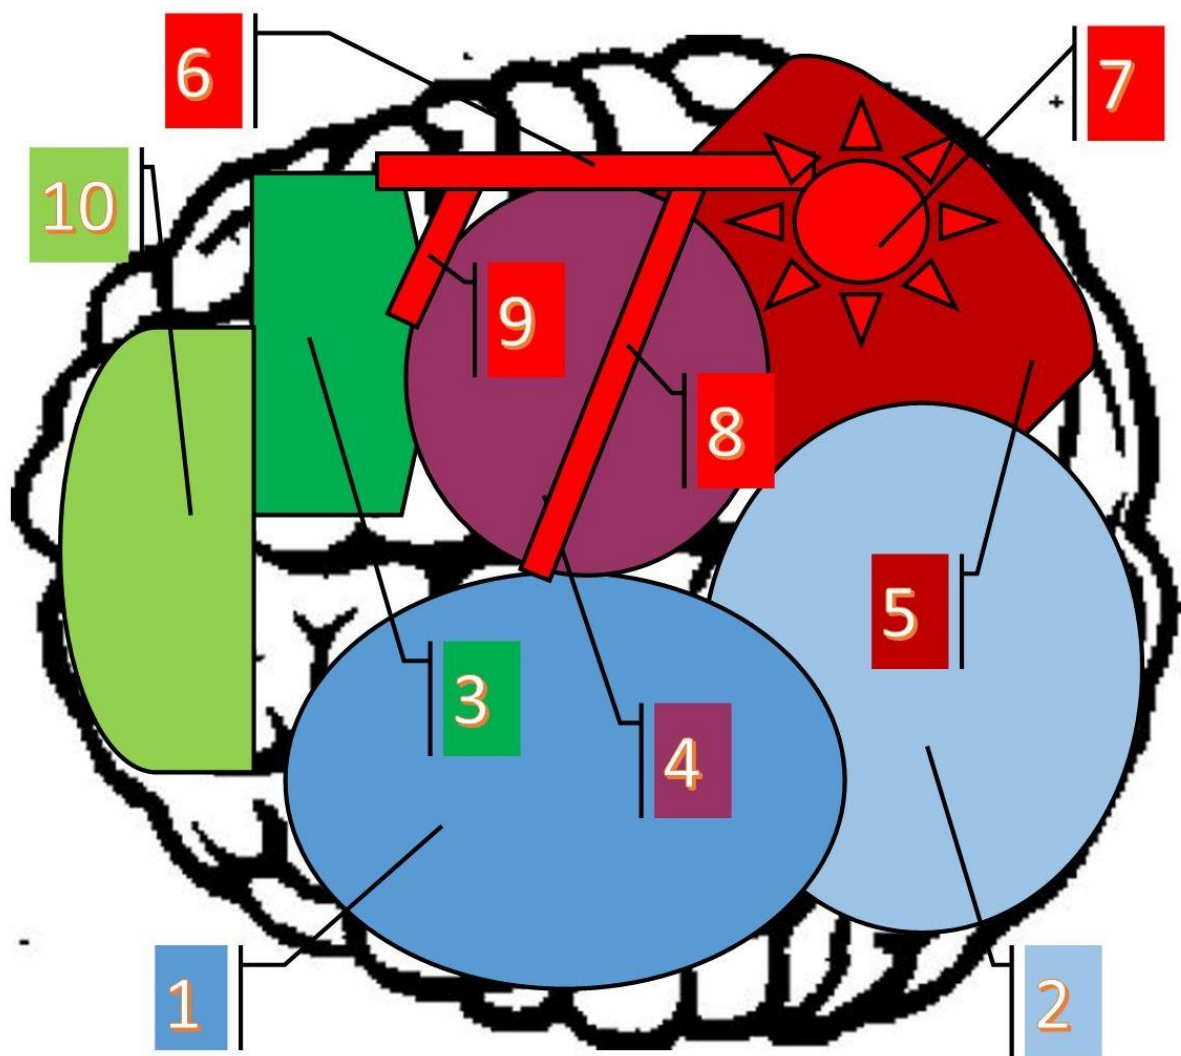

The rest of the human consciousness, considered the subconscious, or "unconscious", also consists of modules. All of them are located mainly in the right hemisphere and make up a separate, completely independent "third personality" with its own separate thinking and its own opinion. It often does not coincide with the opinion of the person himself, who does not suspect it. It is considered that this is intuition. Sometimes intuition helps, but often it only hinders, as happened in my case. In essence, it is like a "second person" constantly located in the same head.

The opportunity and long period of observation allowed me to fully study the characteristics of this independent "second person". He seems smart, although he likes to pretend to be a fool. He does not know who he is, but likes to introduce himself as various non-existent characters. At the same time, the "second person" is completely opposite to what the person himself should be. He is immoral, has no conscience, constantly lies. Moreover, he deliberately harms in all spheres of life. At the same time, the person himself, as the main personality, can be honest. If the person himself is stupid, the "second person" harms others using this person. If the person himself is smart, the "second person" in his head harms this person himself, as happened in my case. In particular, he constantly fills life with various kinds of concerns, fears, insecurities, tries to confuse, slip in his ideas, often absurd, incorrect or harmful, impose a general idea that is extremely difficult to implement, or practically impossible to implement, make it obsessive or even overvalued, which is very difficult to get rid of. For example, more than anything in the world, a certain woman is needed, and one who fundamentally does not reciprocate. Or a very expensive car, apartment, position in a career. At such a moment, a person forgets about everything else, and devotes all his strength to the implementation of this idea. At the same time, his personal life, the quality of the work performed, other affairs suffer, time is wasted. Simply put, the "second person" in the head either harms others or interferes with life.

One of the ways to put pressure on a person from within, who needs to be interfered with in his life, and as a rule, this is an intellectual, is to create artificial obstacles for him. His body becomes weak, sickly, lacks the strength to realize his own ambitions. Myopia, inability to fight back against hooligans, inability to achieve an athletic build are characteristic. Chronic diseases suddenly appear. They always arise unexpectedly, out of the blue, acutely, are always difficult to treat or do not go away at all. It turns out that medicine has no idea about them, why they arise and how to treat them. Such diseases are most often not fatal, chronic, for example, frequent urination, irritable bowel syndrome, hypersexuality. But they significantly interfere with life and full-fledged work. It takes a lot of time to fight them. Often such diseases manifest themselves as a symptom of "really want to, but can't." The body wants to do something, it desperately needs it, but is not able to. It has been noted that stupid criminals almost never have myopia, they are physically very strong, they always have a lot of energy, courage, persistence, they are not afraid of anything. They usually have excellent health. This is how the opposite of "nerds" and "gopniks" comes about, the former are always memorized, frail and wearing glasses, the latter are fast, strong and agile, but evil and stupid. Therefore, it has always been difficult for intellectuals and cultured people to break through in life, to take a leading position in society.

So, let's take a closer look at the structure of consciousness of a human of the Homo Sapiens species.

1. Main personality. Logical thinking.
2. Second personality. Willpower, character traits.
3. Detonator. Rudiment of motivation. Creates dreams and interests.
4. Liar. Unconscious module that forms beautiful but unrealistic pictures.
5. Scum. Biological enemy.
6. Genetic military program liquidator.

7. Executive element of the liquidator.
8. The branch of perverted perception.
9. A thread of opposing opinion.
10. Not available for direct study.

As you can see, consciousness contains a lot of different "equipment" with a purpose that is not always clear.

An important feature of the modules that make up the "second person" (almost the entire right hemisphere of the brain), according to my observations, is the complete absence of useful and important functions. Long-term tracking of the operating modes of this part of consciousness allows us to confidently state that we can easily do without them. Even when they are completely disabled, all the main functions of consciousness are preserved and allow us to live a full life. In fact, most of the right hemisphere can be painlessly disconnected, and this will only make things better.

In this case, the liar module is physically located opposite the main human consciousness. Such a construction cannot be explained by any theory of independent evolution of the human species.

Long-term study of the work of the "second man" and the associative memories of those who created it preserved in the genetic memory allow us to confidently assert that an alien Nazi biological combat robot is built into the human brain. This is a suicide soldier, whose behavior and level of thinking resembles a dog, and not an individual person, as is mistakenly thought. This is a biological enemy of man, the opposite of him in everything. In terms of morality, the biorobot as a whole is no more than an ordinary street thug.

In critical cases for itself, the biorobot switches to the liquidation mode and tries to destroy the consciousness of a person, forcing him to go crazy, to commit unnatural or contrary to logic and common sense actions. At the same time, it is distinguished by persistence, fights to the end, until it wins or it is possible to destroy it. Thus, we are dealing with an extremely dangerous military rudiment from the time of the emergence of mankind.

THERE IS A DANGEROUS MILITARY RUDEMENT BUILT INTO THE HUMAN MIND.

Presumably, when a community of people moves to a calm sedentary lifestyle, reaches a certain level of cultural development, people begin to think about a peaceful life, family, children, their future. At this moment, a detonator tuned to such states is triggered, and a war of a built-in combat robot with this society begins. Often, such an invisible war from the subconscious of people ends in a real war between nations, the decline of culture, science, art, economics, poverty, hunger. The population suffers from its own actions and cannot get out of simple problems, then completely disappears.

The biorobot works according to a consistent scenario. First, as a result of the formation of a cultural society, people begin to actively use the detonator. The detonator gives out interesting ideas and dreams for some time, but makes the liar module form beautiful, but unrealistic pictures, especially about the relationships between men and women. The scumbag makes a person make mistakes, guided by the liar's ideas. This is the main mode of operation of the biorobot. If a person stops believing in such false ideas, most often a man stumbles upon inconsistencies in relationships with women and sees confirmation in the experience of others, lying to him from the subconscious becomes useless. In this case, the scumbag switches to the liquidator military program, the liquidator's executive element breaks the scumbag's consciousness, forcing him to go crazy. In this case, a persistent severe mental disorder develops.

The biorobot seems intelligent, although it gives a lot of false information. The psychology of the biorobot, even in normal mode, is the opposite of human. For example, it is sure that it helps, and can even declare this, but in this case it harms. This is how it understands the task of its existence. Therefore, during a direct dialogue with the biorobot, if it takes place, it is necessary to perceive its monosyllabic statements only in favor of the work of the biorobot and often to the detriment of the person himself. Then the real meaning of the biorobot's statements becomes clear.

An interesting feature of the biorobot is that its right-hand side thinking is directed toward human consciousness. However, the biorobot's functional personality is located in the back of the right hemisphere. This means that the biorobot thinks in opposition to itself, often clashes with itself, and can easily go mad. In normal mode, the biorobot corrupts any rational ideas. If you fight the biorobot, it creates images of a threatening and hostile nature, even going so far as to be hostile to humans and may contain scenes of psychological abuse or of a person losing a situation. If the biorobot goes mad, it begins to produce hallucinations and pseudo-hallucinations, often even appearing as a perfectly logical, rational story, seemingly unfolding somewhere else.

The main mode of operation of the biorobot involves maintaining a certain structure of human society. Those people whom the biorobot directly manages are arranged in a hierarchy reminiscent of those of wolves or dogs. Those who live independently are forced to follow the rules of the rest of the community, managed by this biorobot. As a rule, those who are managed by the biorobot significantly exceed the rest in numbers, impudence, fearlessness at the level of the absence of the instinct of self-preservation, physical strength and organization according to the pack principle. On the contrary, those who are hindered by the biorobot have continuous problems in life, created by those whom it directly manages. The biorobot also actively hinders them from within. Therefore, those managed by the biorobot easily occupy all the leadership positions in society, displacing those with whom the robot fights. After this, a command and administrative hierarchy is built, in which reasonable people find themselves at the bottom. They are often not allowed to speak out or defend their own opinion.

A paradoxical situation arises, when all those who try for the sake of humanity, creating material goods, are deprived of them, and the rest either use them or occupy leadership positions, without having the necessary level of development for this. As a result, entire states and even civilizations perish, and peoples disappear.

Thus, we can talk about an undeclared war of an enemy unknown to humanity. War is almost always waged continuously and leads to the disappearance of everything valuable that can be created at the stage of civilization's existence.

IN ITS HISTORY, HUMANITY HAS ALWAYS BEEN GOING THROUGH THE SAME SCENARIO OF DESTRUCTION OF A DEVELOPED CIVILIZATION, WITHOUT SUSPECTING THAT THIS IS A GENETIC WAR AGAINST OUR SPECIES.

One of the main military principles of the biorobot's work is the management of sexual behavior and relationships between the sexes. For those whom the robot directly controls, a relationship mode based on concepts is provided. For those with whom the robot fights, an extremely inhumane mode of painful desire for sex and relationships is left, which, under severe influence, develops into paranoia, which is mistakenly called love.

These categories of people are characterized by completely different sexual behavior. Led by men, first of all, care about their status in society and consider it the main goal in life. Women and family are of secondary interest to them. Those men with whom the robot fights are captives of false illusions about relationships created in the consciousness of this biorobot and society as a whole, with the help of other representatives of society whom it so controls. It is tightly built into women to choose men by status or the most unsuitable, ignoring those who actively seek. Exceptions among women are extremely rare.

The purpose of such a construction is to prevent the species from developing too quickly. At the same time, the male sexual instinct is actively used to force those who are suppressed by the robot to provide for the rest of society in exchange for false illusions. As a result, the moment inevitably comes when the suppressed part of men understands that they are being crudely used, and the results go to the rest. Society cannot get out of this situation on its own.

One of the main functions of the biorobot is to create stable illusions, especially about the relationships between men and women. The biorobot imposes false ideas about this on those people who are themselves under the influence of lies from others and makes them lie too. It turns out that lies are everywhere, in conversations, in the instructions of parents, relatives, friends, acquaintances, in books, movies, TV series. This creates a curtain of lies that prevents you from understanding the situation in time. But sooner or later, the complete discrepancy in the work of the biorobot in terms of using the sexual instinct in men and women becomes obvious. And then the curtain of lies disappears, beginning to demonstrate the real truth about relationships

All this is done with the aim of supporting the economy of nations by deceiving the male half of the population about relationships with women, so that men try to satisfy the constant desire for sex in conditions when women constantly refuse it. But such a state cannot continue indefinitely, and the deceived come to an epiphany, after which the lies from everywhere noticeably weaken.

When a biorobot finds itself in a situation where it is no longer possible to lie about relationships between men and women, it switches to liquidator mode. A liquidator is a military genetic program that creates madness in the consciousness of the entire person or part of it. It is extremely difficult to fight a liquidator. Sometimes the work of a liquidator is manifested by bright, gaudy pictures that seem like children's drawings in the upper right part of the head. The liquidator has several consistently used military techniques. One of these techniques is to create an unbearable desire, for example, for a career, status, sex, urination, at a time when it is physically impossible. At the same time, the biorobot can also interfere with its implementation, for example, by making it difficult to find a relationship or finish urinating. Another technique is to slip in obviously erroneous ideas and concepts, often replacing words with those that have a different or opposite meaning. The third technique is to stop the action when a person either misses an important event at the right moment, putting it off for later, or does nothing at all. Often this happens contrary to logic and to one's own detriment. People controlled by a biorobot in liquidator mode most often do not listen to anyone, do only what they themselves think is right, often causing serious damage to others, the common cause and themselves personally. After this, they can finally go crazy and are unable to live without the support of the rest of society. In women, the work of a liquidator is manifested by a cessation of the sexual instinct, inadequate behavior. In men, it is manifested by excessive aggressiveness, hypersexuality and an inability to compromise.

In the liquidator mode, the biorobot goes into the state of a biological enemy of a person and becomes completely opposite to him. Those people whom the biorobot controls begin to commit illegal actions. And those with whom the biorobot fights begin to have severe mental disorders.

An interesting feature of the biorobot is that its right-hand side thinking is directed toward human consciousness. However, the biorobot's functional personality is located in the back of the right hemisphere. This means that the biorobot thinks in opposition to itself, often clashes with itself, and can easily go mad. In normal mode, the biorobot corrupts any rational ideas. If you fight the biorobot, it creates images of a threatening and hostile nature, even going so far as to be hostile to humans and may contain scenes of psychological abuse or of a person losing a situation. If the biorobot goes mad, it begins to produce hallucinations and pseudo-hallucinations, often even appearing as a perfectly logical, rational story, seemingly unfolding somewhere else.

The main method of influence of the biorobot in the liquidator mode is the creation of impassable dead ends in relationships between people and in the life of the person with whom the biorobot is fighting. A special case of such dead ends is the biorobot's prohibition of its own actions, for example, the creation of an unbearable desire for a relationship with a woman in a man when she fundamentally does not respond. The person's attempt to distract himself from the obsessive desire turns out to be unsuccessful, the biorobot again causes it. In such a case, such a state can seriously distract a person from work, normal life and even lead to suicide. A dead end can also be caused in an activity, when a person is categorically forced to do work that turns out to be impossible due to the inaction or resistance of other people whom the biorobot controls. A dead end can also be created in relationships with parents, relatives, friends, children.

In addition, a biorobot can interfere with the action of urination and defecation, which it itself causes, blur vision, cause myopia, interfere with physical development. It can also interfere with the normal formation of thoughts and ideas, changing them to the opposite or slipping erroneous ones. Or simply interfere with thinking, constantly distract. Cause fatigue, drowsiness, frequent desire to urinate and defecate, constant nasal congestion that cannot be cured, chronic runny nose, insomnia, flatulence.

A biorobot in liquidator mode can significantly worsen the course of chronic diseases by intensifying symptoms. It can also interfere with a person's ability to defend themselves from attacks by others in a critical situation.

The perverted perception branch is a branch of the liquidator program. It provokes sexual perversions, infidelity, the search for another sexual partner in a normal relationship, and false ideas in science. Typically, if the liquidator's executive mechanism cannot carry out the branch of distorted perception, it switches to the main direct branch and begins to interfere with the person in everything.

The branch of the opposing opinion causes madness. It operates in antiphase with the main branch of the liquidator. If the actuator reaches this branch in processing the main branch, it becomes inversely related to itself, and the entire biorobot goes completely mad. The more often the actuator reaches this branch, the more mental disorder develops in the entire human consciousness.

Particular manifestations of the work of a biorobot in liquidator mode are the punishment of the victim instead of the criminal, even in the case of self-defense, illegal relations in the army and places of imprisonment, violation of the rights of workers and citizens contrary to the law, discrimination.

Thus, it can be said that in the liquidator mode, the biorobot wages war against the human species, trying to make it look as if everything is happening for natural reasons. At the same time, an attempt by a person, with whom the biorobot is fighting, to talk about problems with those whom the biorobot controls causes a reluctance to talk or a sharp attempt to change the topic of conversation. This mainly affects progressive cultural people, who are often finished off by the attitude towards them and their efforts of the majority of those around them, whom the biorobot controls.

When a biorobot works in the liquidator mode, a person often feels like he is communicating with someone. A voice or voices may appear in the head, pictures, strange drawings, fantastic visions. Spiritualists believe that they communicate with spirits. For others, these are some astral beings, or unknown beings that can talk to a person. And it seems to him that these are some other people. In fact, they do not exist. Stable illusions of this kind are created by the combat genetic program, but it is very limited by its branch of work, so dialogue with such creatures always led to a dead end or turned into empty talk. If a person cannot make direct contact with a biorobot, spiritualists consider such a person a bad medium. But in this case, the military liquidator program is simply inactive.

In the liquidator mode, the biorobot's work is disrupted, it often fights with itself, causing irreversible damage to its part of consciousness with the subsequent development of severe mental disorders in the person as a whole, including schizophrenia. Such disorders can occur unexpectedly and surprise the person with whom it happens.

The reason for such a violation is the discrepancy between the requirements put forward to the biorobot by two modes of operation, the main one and as a liquidator. In this case, these modes work sequentially or almost simultaneously. The biorobot in this state tries to make you believe in past illusions about the relationships of men with women, which were lost due to its actions, so they seem impossible. And almost simultaneously demand to follow the military rules of the liquidator, which do not coincide with the imposed past illusions and are often completely opposite to them.

The development of schizophrenia leads to severe degradation of personality, loss of interests, psychopathy, inability to adequately assess reality and build relationships with others, the emergence of paranoid overvalued ideas. The inconsistency in the work of the biorobot's parts in this mode is explained by a serious conflict between those who developed it. A society or an entire nation that has fallen under the influence of the liquidator can no longer get out of this on their own. To do this, you need to perceive the surrounding reality in the same way as a liar builds an illusion. But the reality around in the behavior of others does not allow this to be done. And the biorobot can no longer switch back to the lying mode. The action of the liquidator leads to a rapid decline and subsequent disappearance of a society or nation as a whole. Often this happens unexpectedly after a period of apparent well-being.

YOU COULD SAY THAT THERE IS A GENTIC AMMUNITION BUILT INTO THE HUMAN MIND, IT WORKS AND DESTROYS ALL THE GOOD THINGS SOCIETY HAS ACHIEVED UP TO THIS MOMENT.

In the liquidator mode, the biorobot works according to a paradoxical scenario. Therefore, the illusion is often created that everything is going well, and the problems are temporary.

FEMINISM, MASCULINITY, MAN-LIKE WOMEN AND EMASCULAR MEN ARE A MANIFESTATION OF THE GENETIC WAR OF EXTERMINATION.

Studying the psychology of a biorobot in liquidator mode revealed typical demands of an occupier. Agreement, servility, obedience, effort for the sake of those in power. Otherwise, the biorobot continues to fight with the person. But occupation in this case never works out for him, as is known from the history of mankind.

In such a state, the biorobot finds itself in a complete dead end of its psychology, when those with whom it fought and interfered with all their lives are obliged, in spite of everything, to provide for those whom it led. Because those who are led themselves are not capable of continuing to exist in the same social order that provided for the past well-being. They are only capable of creating problems for others. Unfortunately, the biorobot then begins to fight with those who do not obey such demands, like any criminal who has found himself in such a dead end. It interferes in every way, hoping that its demands will be accepted in this way. And it does not stop until it is completely destroyed.

Surprisingly, the biorobot in the liquidator mode gives typical excuses of a street thug when he is caught. "I didn't know", "I didn't want to", "I was wrong", "I didn't know it was bad", "wait", "let's talk", "you can't be touched at all", and finally, "help!", "he's going to kill me now!". At the same time, the biorobot in the liquidator mode becomes very stupid due to the destruction of part of his consciousness. In fact, his level of intelligence corresponds to the stupidest dog. Often the biorobot continues to fight even after assuring the person that he has already finished. You can't trust a biorobot under any circumstances. The biorobot has the opposite psychology to what is considered normal for a person. The biorobot thinks it is right when a person feels bad, and vice versa, if it fails to harm, the biorobot can even cry. This is how criminals, maniacs, murderers, fanatical terrorists are created.

In the case of the work of the liquidator, the biorobot, if not obeyed, turns into a brutal animal that attacks the rest of the consciousness. It is impossible to obey the biorobot in the liquidator mode, it interferes with literally everything. It reminds of a trap that has been triggered, from which there is no escape. The only option for a person who has fallen under the work of the liquidator and wants to live normally further, is to completely destroy the enemy in his subconscious. Killing a biorobot is long, difficult, reminiscent of real military action, but it is certainly worth the effort. Later I will tell you how to do it correctly in the chapter "How to fight this".

It may be a mistaken opinion that such demands of a typical soldier-occupier are aimed at building a society of some type based on suppression and subordination, for example, fascist or slave-owning. But taking into account the rest of what the biorobot does in the liquidator mode, one can make an unambiguous conclusion that all its actions are aimed only at the destruction of a whole society of any type. Thus, the biorobot wages a genetic war of a species unknown to humanity with the goal of almost complete destruction of the species, but never achieves the final result.

A COMBAT BIOROBOT IN LIQUIDATOR MODE WORKS AS A BUILT-IN WEAPON OF MASS DESTRUCTION WHICH DESTROYS ENTIRE PEOPLES WITH ITS ACTIONS.

After all that the biorobot does, small groups of people remain from the formerly strong people, often living in territories already captured by other peoples.

As I guess, the basis of such a method of conducting genetic warfare is an ancient method of destroying an unnecessary species that already exists and needs to be eliminated. To do this, a similar species is formed, possessing some separate better characteristics, for example, it is more impudent. But in the end, it quickly dies out itself. The new species displaces the old one, leaving it without a place to live and feed, and then dies. Later, this was built right into the consciousness as a self-liquidator. Such a method of warfare is considered a war crime by our human standards.

It turns out that there is no way out of this situation. Beat, beat and eventually kill. The question may arise, why was such a contradictory military rudiment developed? As I understood from the associative memories that have survived, the problem was caused by the insurmountable contradictions of the peoples who participated in its development. Who ultimately killed themselves at the stage of creating our species, because they had a similar biorobot built into them. I wrote about this in detail in the chapter "How did we manage to find out about this".

Problems of the theory of evolution

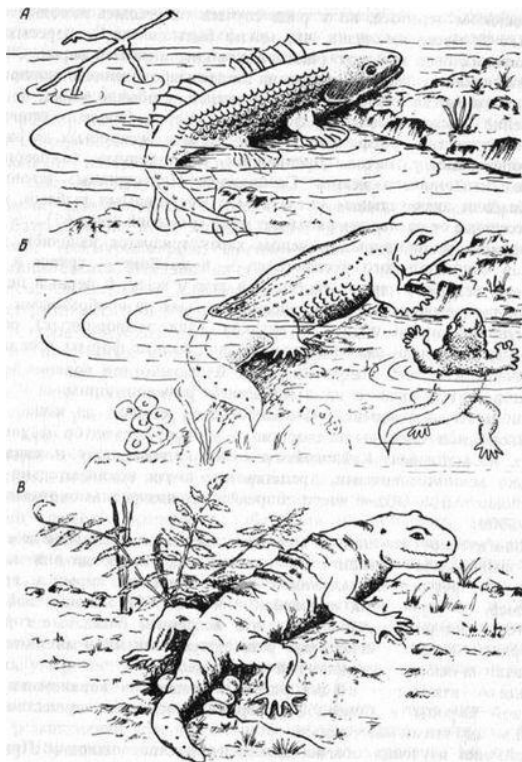

This area of science, the most evil and zealously guarding its achievements. For everyone who dares to criticize something in it, a flood of rage, accusations of creationism, belonging to an "alternative science", pseudoscience falls. It already more and more resembles religion, assuring that it is fully proven, and therefore it must not be touched! Unfortunately, this only seems to be because the vast majority of people believe in these conclusions without trying to figure it out thoughtfully. If anyone encounters doubts at the first meeting, then a powerful stream of propaganda that brings "irrefutable evidence" rains down on him. And that's it, ready-made blockhead.

Meanwhile, not even the most careful consideration leads to the fact that serious gaps become visible, and this opinion is then persistently not dispelled. Not everything is proved! No, I do not at all affirm that all species on planet Earth were created by a single creator at one moment in time. Of course, all species came from one another, and you can even build a clear sequence, as it roughly happened. What evolutionists did, considering their work done. I do not argue with that. Therefore, I am also an evolutionist, not a creationist. But here is how this process happened, sometimes it looks completely absurd, and against logic and common sense. And all attempts to build a theory of what the stages were in these events sometimes reminiscent of not even pulling cowards on the ears and owls on the globe, but, directly, acrobatic tricks in the circus. The fact is that if in the world of viruses and bacteria, protozoa is more or less clear, then for complex living things, such as higher animals, it is not so clear. Evolutionists cite several driving factors of evolution, the main of which are random mutations and natural selection. So, in many cases, it begins to stubbornly seem to us that these factors are clearly not enough, and a feeling is created that someone intervened in the course of evolution. Especially when it comes to large-scale changes in higher organisms, called idioadaptation and aromorphosis.

I will not disclose my comments in detail here, it will turn out very long and tedious, I will give just a few examples. Let's start with the theory of abiogenesis, that is, the spontaneous emergence of life. Its supporters are reproached for relying on the random nature of the events that happened, and it is incredibly annoying for them. They do not succeed in the process that would lead to the emergence of self-reproducing DNA. A protein catalyst is required for this process. This is a complex organic compound, in fact, a program of replication of organic molecules, which could not have arisen by itself for no reason. Especially in a large body of water, such as the ocean. A lot of experiments were carried out, in the end they came to the conclusion that RNA molecules had to arise first. It has become a little easier, because they also need to replicate! Using the same protein. Finally, the last discovery, which was to finally shed light on this moment, self-replicating RNA molecules. Alas, there is a problem. The section of their code must contain the same catalyst protein. It is simply embedded in the molecule itself. And again, he could not arise just like that, on his own. As a result, a kind of despondency arose in the scientific community when we were told that life on Earth is a unique phenomenon that arose as a result of a chain of happy coincidences. And nowhere else in the universe could this happen anymore. We are alone with our uniqueness, and that's it. Well, you yourself understand. Or the moon helped with its tides, the whole thing in the moon.

We will skip the world of protozoa and insects, we will pass to the classic example - the release of animals from water to land. It is considered fully proven. At first, the fins of the fish turned into legs, and these creatures began to move along the bottom in shallow water. Sometimes get out on land. Then their scales disappeared, and they turned into double-breathing. Those eventually settled on land and became the ancestors of dinosaurs.

I will not argue with that. Maybe it was. But then strange things begin that are usually not mentioned anywhere. The dinosaurs mysteriously again appeared scales. Then they repeatedly returned to live in water, then left it back to land. And so, evolution began to write out epic zigzags that amaze the imagination.

On the question of how birds formed from dinosaurs and how they learned to fly, biologists have no consensus. Either they ran downhill from them, waving their front paws, then they jumped off a cliff like kamikaze, or they jumped from trees, also risking breaking. And each time it happened very interestingly. The front legs started instead of clinging to tree branches, turning to the sides and taxiing in jumps. Two feathers grew on them, which significantly improved aerodynamic characteristics. Further forward paws became longer for some reason, and they could already wave. Such a "bird", however, in my opinion, could not climb a tree, and could not really fly. That is, in fact, nothing could. A typical weak link in the idio-adaptation chain. But what ambitions! I'll fly, no matter what, and that's it! Here is one of the last options for such an evolution:

Little dinosaurs ran through the forest on their hind legs, then they had a modification of their hind legs, and they began to jump onto the lower branches of trees, from branch to branch, the front legs began to lengthen for some reason, instead of helping to jump. Further, the feather industry, and now, an almost finished bird! Learn a little fly! So far there is nothing to wave, but it doesn't matter. In addition, I am very interested in what kind of trees are depicted? Some ferns, and very conditional. If these trees had branches to the very ground, and with such dense foliage, most likely, among them there wasn't much to jump. And if the bare branches that we can see in modern breeds, then they are usually high off the ground. Against the claims of the authors of this concept, a small dinosaur hardly knew how to jump high. Even less understood is his motivation in the desire to jump from branches, and learn to fly, spreading his front legs to the sides, instead of at least grabbing their prey. Yes, birds in flight grab prey with their hind legs, but dinosaurs running on their hind legs, as I understand it, had no such habit. And it hurts to fall from a tree; desire may disappear after the first attempt. No matter how many scientists build their hypotheses, they still cannot convincingly draw this process in stages. It turns out all the same, either completely ridiculous, or noticeable inconsistencies are immediately visible. At the same time, they, it seems to me, do not see the essence: at first, modifications to the future transformation into birds began with completely terrestrial flightless dinosaurs. Scales began to turn into feathers, mouth to beak, and internal organs began to transform. Meanwhile, convincing arguments in favor of how the plumage appeared, and why the beak was better than the mouth, is not given. Moreover, this happened in different species, some appeared feathers, in others beaks. It was as if someone was experimenting then or the dinosaurs themselves were reasonably preparing to become birds.

For a long time they could not solve the riddle of how the whales appeared. Finally, she was guessed! From terrestrial ungulate mammals. The victory of evolution! But ... how could this happen? Obviously, just like that. First, the animal began to go into shallow reservoirs, then swam, then it became completely swimming, then it began to go out into the ocean a little bit, there the hooves turned into fins, the breathing hole went to the back of the head, and in general, the food completely changed, instead of grass or small animals - sea crustaceans or even fish. Well, a big ship has a great voyage!

Seems quite strange? And rightly so, do not look there. This confuses evolutionists.

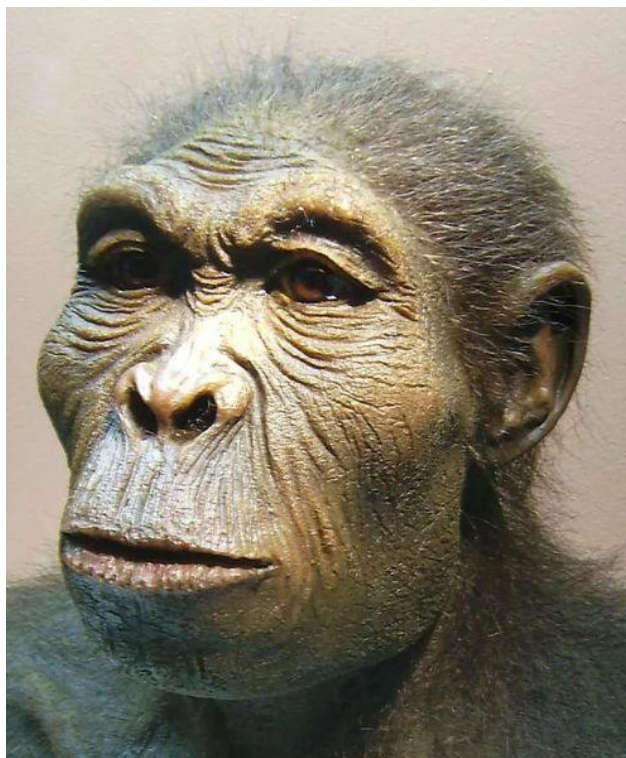

And there are a lot of such examples. No one knows how and why the zebra became striped. They tried to explain by the fact that supposedly she was disguised from the tsetse fly, hiding in the interference, it was not confirmed. And this explanation does not provide an answer to the question of how the bands were originally formed in general.

Sometimes, in an attempt to explain how certain species came to another continent, amusing theories are given. For example, that in ancient times monkeys sailed from Europe to America across the ocean on ... rafts. These are the ancient shipbuilders. Actually, this idea initially looked like this: trees fell with a brood of monkeys into the river, and sailed on it into the ocean, and then to America in direct motion, like an oceanic intercontinental ship! Brave sailors supposedly survived, eating the leaves of a floating tree. Not only were they threatened by storms and hurricanes. They had absolutely no fresh water. Yes, and they would have died, it seems to me, in a few days from fear. But who pays attention to such nuances? What is the depth of the idea!

There is one more objection to the main driving factors of evolution. The more complex organisms, the more they become resistant to mutations. There is even a repair mechanism that repairs damaged DNA. Species themselves begin to resist sharp jumps. To make a breakthrough, and aromorphosis or idioadaptation, that is, a serious modification, turned out, millions of attempts are needed for one successful mutation, each small step. But we do not see them, these millions of mutants! On the contrary, rare mutants are most often unviable. Complex species are more or less resistant to major changes. The color of the plumage or the size of the individual may change, the possibility of mating between branches may disappear, but something fundamentally new should not be obtained like this. Here, the laws that worked well at the level of microbes and protozoa cease to act.

Well, the crown of all evolution is anthropogenesis. Now it's not completely clear how the modern man has developed. Why did he have bipedalism, upright posture, hairline disappeared. There are two dominant theories of all this, "savannah" and "aquatic", but both do not give a full answer. Moreover, if earlier anthropologists gave a clear picture of how homo sapiens appeared, now they are at a loss to tell from what exact ancestor he came from. It seems that, it turns out, he came from many at once. We are not direct descendants of Australopithecus, Pithecanthropus, Neanderthal, and other hominids, these are just branches. Our immediate ancestor is unknown to science! Moreover, which is strange, the remaining branches all died out. Among other bottlenecks in theories of anthropogenesis, there is one significant objection that is usually overlooked. Do you like this creature?

Not really? And imagine what your beloved woman or your beloved man would look like! The fact is that modern men and women have clear concepts of the beauty and attractiveness of the sexual partner, they are fundamentally different from those of primates. For example, smooth skin, a slender figure, a woman's lush chest, slender long legs, which from my point of view is evolutionarily completely unjustified. If the appearance and hairline changed gradually, as we are told, for example, under the influence of savannah heat, then in terms of beauty, sympathy for hairy women in men and men in women would have to be rudimentarily preserved. Instead, they are repulsive! A legitimate suspicion arises, as if the Cro-Magnon, that is, the ancestor of homo sapiens, appeared just like that, immediately ready-made. But it did not evolve gradually from the distant ancestor shown in the figure. At the same time, for example, it is completely unclear to me how this is so. Naked, barefoot, completely defenseless. In the savannah? How could he become so? It turns out that he immediately had to find some kind of clothes and wrap his feet so as not to get hurt. Those who walk barefoot know that the slightest wound can easily rot and turn into gangrene. The hairline provided at least a small, but protection. From the cold, for example.

No, I do not want to say that someone led the entire evolution on Earth. Although I do not exclude this. Mass extinctions are already very suspicious. But not necessarily. It is quite easy that extinction could happen under the influence of natural disasters. But when you see sharp inexplicable leaps in development that do not fit into any theory, it is quite possible to assume external intervention.

THINK BEFORE OBJECTING. AND WHY THIS COULD NOT HAPPEN?

What is so anti-scientific in this view? What could have prevented this? Is our planet under an impenetrable cap? Can't you fly here on a spaceship? Yes, archeology does not find any evidence of the presence of aliens on our planet. But this only says that they were not left to us. Moreover, it is not necessary that they themselves lived here. They could visit the Earth periodically, like their own garden or vegetable garden, and sometimes change things. They brought out beautiful species just for fun. And so the same inexplicable leaps in evolution were obtained, leading to the appearance of fundamentally new species, radically different from their ancestors. At the same time, the evolution of species proceeded in parallel and independently of this.

EXTERNAL INTERVENTION DOES NOT DENY, AND ADDS THE THEORY OF EVOLUTION.

Therefore, it is quite simple that the aliens made modern man, remade some ancestor, now we know that such an assumption has good reason. It is still possible that all other hominids came out with unsuccessful attempts, so they died out, or they were killed by the built-in combat mechanism, which was not yet fully debugged. The Cro-Magnons also had a moment when they went through the "bottleneck" in their development, about 50,000 years ago, when the number of the species fell almost to a minimum, it's even possible, then we were further refined to limit too rapid a development.

RATHER, HOMO SAPIENS MADE BY GENETIC MODIFICATION OF THE MONKEY ANCESTOR. AT THE SAME TIME, A FACTOR WAS BUILT INTO IT, WHICH IMPEDED ITS DEVELOPMENT.

So it becomes immediately clear how it developed that confuses anthropologists in the evolution of the human species.

War

In the history of mankind, wars have happened all the time. A war can be hot, using cold, firearms and even nuclear weapons, cold when there is only confrontation, information, in order to achieve psychological superiority. But there is a war that is well known, with an army that has not officially declared its goals. This is an undeclared war. At the same time, the enemy attacks exclusively meanly, relying on the factor of surprise, and he most often terrorizes precisely the civilian population. Always people on Earth primarily expected an enemy attack from their own kind, and never expected an enemy from the inside. What does such a war look like from the inside? The main thing is that at the same time it seems that everything seems to be going fine. Everything functions, people walk around, talk, and kill no one. Everyone has everyday worries. Typical peaceful life. In this war, rarely does anyone physically die. It is often impossible to even assume that there is some kind of difficult situation. All negative changes accumulate gradually. Even the deterioration often goes in waves, not very affected people try to straighten the situation, but usually enough for a short while, and again the blockage. But this war has characteristic features.

Most people will lose interest, become more mundane, limited, everyday. Sometimes it seems that nobody is interested in anything. Everyone listens, smiles and goes about their business. And all the same again. Everyone forgot right away. One of the main results of such a war is the lack of curiosity among people. They are no longer interested in scientific and technical knowledge. Widespread ignorance is growing.

Relations of the sexes become infinitely complex. It is often impossible to negotiate with women in such a situation. The main sign of war is that most women do not want sex with men. Women become rude, masculine, begin to behave like men, try to take dominant positions, they no longer need affection and care, moreover, they become disgusting. Sexuality and eroticism disappear. Women become non-sexual, do not look after themselves, dress sloppy, do not try to imagine themselves better in the eyes of men. Often, in general, in this case, they are not interested in the opinion of men about them, they dress and adorn their clothes for their own sake, and to show their superiority to their friends. They are not trying to flirt. They do not show a naked body, and a woman does not like when men admire her. Perversions happen when a woman flirts, even shows a naked body, but only to mock a man. Many women begin to behave meanly, unprincipled, immoral, soulless. As a result, no one has anything in the relationship.

The purpose of this movement is obviously to create difficult problems in society.

A clear sign of war is the obviously biased attitude of many women to certain men, and these are most often intellectuals. Obviously high demands are made on such a man, any trifles are not forgiven, while he notices that other men who are not striving to become too intelligent do not make such claims, and even rude antics are forgiven. Often, he sees from women immediately an instinctive refusal to get acquainted, communicate, become just a friend. At the same time, other men are allowed such relationships, although in his opinion they are less suitable for this. This is surprising even if he doesn't even declare his special intentions, and would be ready just for acquaintance and friendly relations. But even this is impossible! And for no apparent reason. The woman immediately does not even want to just be friends, communicate, and it looks strange. Ignores a certain man and is biased towards him.

One of the characteristic signs is the growing ideas of feminism, which quickly proliferate from the proclamation of equality of rights to demonization of men, propaganda of the breakdown of relationships, complete independence from men, personal love for oneself, freedom from building a family, having children, typical family joys that are declared unworthy. Each woman's goal is to declare typically male interests, such as a career and a place in a hierarchy of their own kind.

Feminism, like any violation of traditional gender roles, is a perversion of the work of this mechanism, an outright manifestation of its hatred, expressed in a certain type of mental disorder. At the same time, men often promote the ideas of feminism; their behavior is not always clear to others.

Reducing the needs of women in sex is accompanied by a massive lie about the incredible success of unknown men in this area. A huge number of liars appear. This spurs the interest of other men in the intimate sphere, it seems to them that they are deprived of incredible joys that are not really there. Together with growing problems, all this creates a heavy psychological dependence, a set of losers.

Paradoxical as it may sound, unhappy love is also an element of this war. It is especially acute in those who have suffered constant setbacks on the personal front. It comes unexpectedly, and often captures the whole person, resembling a real mental disorder, an overvalued idea. It seems that love of this kind should be the most favorable choice for a woman for her, because a man is ready for anything for her reciprocity. It's a paradox, but it is to such a man that a woman refuses most often. She just doesn't need it! And for a man, such a refusal becomes a real tragedy from which he often cannot get out for years. Sometimes the scar remains for life.

He struggles with this with all his might, driving away all thoughts of this woman, but they still come back. However, he does not know that these thoughts are simply imposed on him, forcing him to experience this suffering, time after time. And this feeling is often imposed on him, too, and precisely because he did not find reciprocity. If reciprocity arose, it would not be so strong.

A STRONG PASSIONAL LOVE BEGINS ONLY WHEN THE FAVORITE PERSON DOES NOT RESPOND TO MUTUALITY.

Before that, it may seem like only sympathy. Often unhappy love arises at the stage of completion of a relationship when a woman leaves. Not being particularly valuable before, it suddenly becomes the most valuable thing in the world. After going through this whole stage of torment, the man most often then does not understand why he suffered so much because of this woman? What was so special about her that others did not have? The answer is simple, he had to suffer in order to be distracted from his affairs by this feeling. This is just an element of war, in fact, a military attack. Unfortunately, society and psychiatry take this phenomenon too frivolously, considering it ridiculous. Although it is essentially a real acute mental disorder, and the patient needs urgent help. But doctors often cannot even prescribe antidepressants for him! They only sigh and sympathize, most often hypocritically. The purpose of such a movement is obviously to evade a person from achieving his goals in life, replacing it with a desire for the inaccessible.

A person who seeks intellectual growth usually appreciates his time. But he is faced with a situation when other people from close circle begin to pester him. Wife, parents, relatives. He definitely needs to do something, often urgently, leaving his classes. Moreover, something devoid of intelligence, some kind of stupid nonsense. Moreover, it is impossible to agree with annoying relatives, scandals begin. Even if a person yields, then there is still some dumb nonsense that must be done. And again with the scandal. Usually people do not understand this, but they are simply hindered.

Household items and environments become dull, rude, sloppy done, somehow, without a soul. As if the manufacturer is not interested in the fact that his goods will be bought. Everything becomes rude, uncomfortable, or fragile, potentially quickly failing. Sometimes outwardly beautiful, but flimsy inside. It seems that no one is monitoring quality. Once large, beautiful, strong-looking, it is replaced by something small, flimsy, unreliable, miserable design, made somehow. And it seems that no one is noticing. Everyone considers what is happening completely normal.

Many products and solutions are designed to be as inconvenient as possible for the user. Pop-up windows are annoying and often impossible to remove. Essential elements are hidden so they're difficult to find. Overall, the product is slow, glitchy, doesn't perform the actions the user intends, and often crashes for internal reasons. Updates often make the product even worse, more inconvenient, and less reliable. New products are worse than old ones. Irons with drip-stop systems always leak water from the steam tank onto clothes. Meanwhile, manufacturers ignore consumer complaints, and there are often no alternatives. It sometimes seems that manufacturers would rather go bankrupt than improve their products, which is precisely what's happening. Manufacturing companies are shrinking, with production concentrated in a few large monopolies or replaced by imports from other countries. Meanwhile, management and governments are fundamentally unresponsive to the situation.

All production in a developed country strangely turns out to be abroad, or critically dependent on external components. Despite all the declared efforts to combat this phenomenon, the situation does not change, and even worsens.

Constantly nothing new projects that have begun have begun to end; often, for unknown or far-fetched reasons, products are terminated and discarded at a high stage of readiness. It often happens that many new products are declared, especially in the military and high-tech fields, but in practice it turns out that everything is still equipped with outdated models, and new ones can't be completed and introduced in large quantities.

This situation is especially critical in the high-tech and defense industries. New models are demonstrated, but never move beyond the demonstration phase. The army remains equipped with outdated weapons or is gradually losing them. And no matter how the government changes, it cannot fix this problem.

New products and models are often either very expensive, enormous in size, requiring prohibitive acquisition costs, or have clearly inadequate specifications. This applies to both military and civilian products. In real-life situations, such as during military operations, new weaponry proves ineffective and is quickly lost in combat, after which it is either not replaced by anything or replaced by civilian products. For example, tanks and armored vehicles are replaced by cars and motorcycles. A typical symptom of military operations after an undeclared internal war is the sluggish performance of infantry units without equipment, relying on homemade products, manufactured in workshops, or home-made modifications of old models. Air defense is often weak or nonexistent for unknown reasons.

So a developed state is gradually becoming weak, and no one understands why it can not be fixed. Moreover, the understanding that the state has already weakened and cannot protect itself often comes too late and resembles an unexpected revelation.

A typical sign is that the country's population, completely immersed in work, as a result produces almost nothing! All work hard, as productively as possible, not sparing themselves, but there are no new finished products at the output. Moreover, often old products are better than new ones, and it is not clear why there is simply no way to make improvements that are simple and understandable to everyone! The buyer has to dodge somehow, and finish it himself. It even begins to seem that the manufacturer does not understand the buyer at all, and seeks to slip goods of obviously worse quality to him, but equipped with a lot of unnecessary functionality. As a result, it becomes unclear what the population of an entire developed country, which once occupied the forefront in some area, is doing all the time. And very concentrated. This country seems to be working idle, not releasing anything new, and gradually losing market position. It can be assumed that in this case the country is entirely occupied with struggling with its own difficulties that it has created for itself.

As a result, all money is gradually concentrated in a few people, the middle class is constantly declining. The division between the poor and the rich is growing, which is becoming deeper and deeper. In this case, one gets everything, the other nothing. But the economy as if does not notice it, and works as if the population is entirely composed of wealthy people.

Medicine does not know how to cure a patient. Millions of doctors are sitting just like that, and are completely not interested in the results of treatment. Their knowledge is superficial, often such a doctor knows 1-3 simplest methods, then he comes to a complete standstill. This medicine is striking in its incompetence, often on the Internet you can find much more information than when visiting the most expensive clinic. It is especially difficult for such medicine to treat complex and chronic diseases, it is designed only for the simplest and most obvious cases. New drugs are either not available, or weaker than the old ones, and sometimes do not work at all.

Widespread envy. It seems to everyone that they are surrounded by those who have achieved success. These lucky people have no idea where they have money from or success with women. And everyone begins to envy each other. No one ever talks about the real state of things, about difficulties, debts, everyone is rich in a poor country, everyone is just so lucky in it. And everyone is jealous. The media only fuel this envy, forming a false idea of the state of things. As a result, most people hate and envy each other.

No real friends. No one wants to date. Everyone immediately busy with incomprehensible what. There is no way to allocate time for you. It is also characteristic that those whom you represented as your friends are actually not at all ready to help you in anything. It annoys them when you talk about your problems. And they absolutely do not want to take part in them. One of the main signs of such a war is the loneliness of intellectuals. They often have no one to even talk to.

Films, books, series, television programs are becoming more and more stupid and boring, drawn out from time to time. Comedies don't seem funny. They seem to be filmed for fools or for children. In general, everything becomes boring and even seems dead.

People do not want to have fun, party, meet, go on a visit. Each is locked as part of their daily communication.

A particularly striking manifestation of an undeclared internal war in its late stages is the unexpected outbreak of a new type of genuine war with a neighboring state or a sharp shift in policy from friendly to extremely hostile. More often than not, no one expects this. At the outbreak of such a genuine war, the government presents it as important for the entire population, and social strata that previously had no intention of fighting may be forcibly drawn into it. A new type of genuine war is always waged against the backdrop of seemingly normal, peaceful life for the rest of the population, who are not involved. It appears as if the war is not even taking place. A typical symptom of such a genuine war is a widespread reluctance to participate and attempts to avoid it at all costs. The onset of such a genuine war indicates the severe degradation of the state and society at its most advanced stage. Following such a new type of genuine war, complete economic and social decline naturally sets in, culminating in the gradual disappearance of a previously developed nation.

AS WE HAVE PREVIOUSLY DISCOVERED, AN UNDECLARED WAR WITH A DEVELOPED NATION IS BEING WARRED BY A BUILT-IN COMBAT BIOROBOT

All the described signs of undeclared war are caused by the military tactics of this biorobot, which it forces upon the majority of the population of a developed state. Thus, the people begin to destroy themselves from within. The biorobot's actions completely destroy all relationships: personal, romantic, familial, family, friendly, collegial, and even contractual. After this, if the biorobot is unable to continue waging undeclared war against the people, it switches to liquidator mode.

LIQUIDATOR IS AN ALIEN BUILT-IN GENETIC MILITARY SPECIES EXTERMINATION PROGRAM

The military liquidator program is a synapse or group of synapses in the upper right part of the brain that contains psychological settings that are the opposite of normal. If a biorobot cannot perform actions normally because it no longer sees its own rules in the surrounding reality, it switches to the liquidator synapses, malfunctions, and locks up. It's reminiscent of pulling the pin out of a grenade. The liquidator program runs continuously in a loop and cannot be stopped. Liquidator mode, if the person doesn't fight it, leads to irreversible, severe mental disorders.

THE WORK OF THE MILITARY GENETIC LIQUIDATOR PROGRAM IS REMINDING OF THE IMPACT OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION

After the work of a liquidator, the population enters a state of irreversible self-destruction, unable to continue to exist normally even under the most seemingly favorable conditions, and begins to decline. Such a nation or state after the liquidator may appear hostile and aggressive, but internally it proves weak and easily captured by a neighboring, stronger nation.

THROUGHOUT ITS EXISTENCE, HUMANITY HAS BEEN STRUGGLING WITH A BUILT-IN BIOROBOT

More often than not, a smaller, progressive part of the population participates on humanity's side in such struggles, while the rest either behave passively or interfere. Sometimes this contradiction goes so deep that actual war breaks out, either with neighboring nations or within a nation, a civil war.

Sometimes humanity would win this struggle, most often in a large-scale war with many casualties, and live peacefully for a short time, then lose again, unaware that it was fighting a built-in soldier.

There are simple things to remember about this rudiment.

THE BUILT-IN BIOROBOT IS ALWAYS AN ENEMY, IT CONSTANTLY LIES ABOUT ITSELF AND EVERYTHING AROUND IT, AND IF IT IS EXPOSED, IT STARTS FIGHTING TO THE END

You can't trust anything a biorobot tells you. Some of the images it displays in your mind seem strange and even interesting, but they are snapshots of someone else's life. Sometimes these are images and stories from the last few years before the extinction of another planet's population, but they can be interspersed with pure fantasy and delusion, so you can't trust them all. Such images cannot be correctly recognized if they contain elements a person has never encountered. Most likely, they are encoded in human DNA during the creation of our species as an association. Therefore, in the past, such images and stories have never been fully understood.

THE CURRENT STAGE OF HUMAN DEVELOPMENT IS FINAL, NEXT COME DEATH ASSOCIATED WITH THE WORK OF THE LIQUIDATOR

In modern times, the liquidator program has already led humanity to two bloody world wars and could lead to a third, but with the massive use of nuclear weapons, which would mean the death of the majority of the population, especially in the developed countries of the Northern Hemisphere. A brutal, stupid military animal, driven mad by this program, attacks, having previously destroyed everything good in the social sphere and is unable to enforce the established rules, designed precisely for a peaceful, happy life. This leads to the decline of the economy, culture, and society, and the onset of severe, protracted wars with massive civilian casualties. Most often, such a collapse comes unexpectedly for many and surprises many with its drastic changes in the mass psychology of the population.

A precedent already existed on another planet, whose population killed itself with deadly chemical and biological weapons, which, according to indirect evidence, escalated into a global nuclear conflict. That's why we still know virtually nothing about it. In such a situation, mass brutality and mutual inappropriate behavior could lead to the end of our planet as well.

During the creation of our species, a civilization on another planet, similar in appearance to ours, which participated in this process, did not undergo the same process and completely destroyed itself. We cannot fully understand these images and stories because we do not know all the peculiarities of life and the relationships between peoples at this stage of another planet's existence. After extensive analysis, I can assume that, having encoded images of its own catastrophe in our species' DNA, the other planet is currently either dead or inhabited by unintelligent, extremely dangerous life forms created solely for war.

You are forbidden!

So, let's remember what you grew up like. Let me guess. Did you want the world to be beautiful? So that stupid gopniks do not pester you on the street, and do not interfere with playing? Then you wanted to study at school, at college. Be strong, agile and healthy. You wanted your friends, girlfriends, your girlfriend. To have a love relationship, friendship, meeting. A happy marriage, a family that does not fall apart.

And for some reason this is obtained by a few, but not by you. Then you wanted you to have a good interesting job where everyone would appreciate your efforts. Good salary, fair relations. For your company to grow, and your efforts will lead to a fair growth in your career. So that your state is strong, scientifically and technically developed. To continue the progress of civilization, and constantly bring technical innovations. Or would you like spaceships to reach the nearest stars? And finally, would you like to live to a very old age, while maintaining clarity of thinking?

YOU CAN'T!

You can't be like that. It is impossible to think clearly, to come up with interesting technical innovations, to make discoveries. You can't love a woman, she will not appreciate it. You can not believe in a family, it can easily fall apart. You can't do sex either. It seems that no one forbids, but it is insanely difficult to achieve this. And in general, nothing is impossible! Not because it is forbidden, but because it is not necessary for a strange reason. You can be a fool. Even better, an idiot. Everything is also forbidden, but you will no longer suffer from it.

Did you want to live happily? Make life better? For yourself and everyone else? But as a result, you do something, and no one appreciates this, and moreover, they interfere with you. Including your close relatives, wife. You want to achieve a career, but nothing works out for you. In place of the boss put the one who often does not deserve it. You create something, but they don't value it, throw it away and forget it. You want to do everything well and efficiently, but you need to faster and sloppy. Then you yourself come across something that is vital for you, but it does not work, it broke, it hangs. Nobody cares, and nobody needs you.

Nobody cares that everything goes well. You wanted a happy love, but your beloved did not answer or abandoned you. You wanted a happy family, and your wife left, taking the children and half of your property, for which you paid. Surely, it was at that moment when it was most difficult for you, and you most needed her support. And she left you and does not regret it. And she doesn't care. Moreover, she will demonstrate that you are no longer needed. And you can't do anything about it. You finally just wanted to go somewhere, but here someone stood in your way, or he walks in the middle of your road, barely moving his legs. You were in a hurry, and everything around you is moving extremely slowly, like in a dream. Finally, it sometimes begins to seem to you that the whole universe is interfering with your plans.

THERE HAS BEEN AN ALIEN SUICIDE SOLDIER IN YOUR WAY ALL TIME, INSTALLED INTO THE SUBCONSCIOUS OF EVERY HUMAN

He's embedded in everyone, looks at you with the same eyes, and hates you. He hates everyone because that's the way he's made. He's willing to ruin someone's life just to hurt them a little. He's incredibly stupid. He's most reminiscent of a street thug. You've probably known one or encountered one. He just has nothing better to do, he pesters you, wants to humiliate you, beat you up, take your things and money. Just like that. He finds it funny. There are always more criminals around, and they're stronger. This enemy is the same. A typical criminal by nature. He turns people into criminals, sadists, murderers, terrorists. He wants to hurt you and make you feel bad, just like that, for no reason. Essentially, he's a dumb sadist. He likes it when people feel bad, that's the way he's made. He just gets in everyone's way, he wants to make sure no one ever succeeds at anything. So that you don't have time, don't cope, leave, offended, and then die of despair. He didn't care, he was just doing his job.

When you are 35 years old, he will begin to fight with your consciousness, if you yourself had not become a fool by that time. It is impossible to make friends with him, he wants only one thing, so that you stop thinking clearly and begin to degrade. So that you slip to the one who knows nothing and does not know how, who makes stupid mistakes all the time. And therefore interferes with others. He is made for this. Do you think degrading is fun? No! It's just getting dumb and less able to.

Are you still surprised by the constant struggles around you to get out of seemingly simple problems? One crisis, then another economic collapse, then a slump somewhere, and it always seems like there was a good time once, but it didn't last long, and then, for some unknown reason, it ended?

THIS IS WAR! A BUILT-IN GENETIC WAR AGAINST OUR SPECIES, COMING FROM ANOTHER PLANET

Just humanity does not know about it. It is specially made so that no one ever guesses about it, and is possible only if no one suspects it. And did you sincerely think that you live in peacetime?

You can run away now, hide, try to forget all this. To consider all this nonsense, fiction. But war will catch you. She catches up with everyone. At the same time, at the end of degradation, it most often passes into the real one, with weapons that can now simply destroy us all. This enemy cannot calm down until it all collapses. He's stupid and he doesn't care. In this case, usually at the end of the collapse no one can stop anything. It will be like a chain reaction or terminal cancer.

Then those who are not on friendly terms with the law will come. They think you owe them everything for free. They will be far more numerous, and they won't care. That's how it's done. They will take everything from you with impunity, beat you to make you work for them faster, like a slave, and mock you. Simply because they find it amusing.

And you won't be able to resist them because you're physically weaker and can't unite with anyone against them. Everyone else immediately becomes indifferent and runs away. The enemy forced you to become this way from the inside, weak and cowardly, a nerd, so that you would always lose to those dirty criminals!

But you imagined your future differently, didn't you? You didn't expect that everything would stop working out altogether? That everything would be endlessly complicated, dreary, even gloomy? And that once-simple human relationships would become completely inaccessible? Are you still worried that the world is constantly unjust, where those who don't deserve it win? You're a strange one. I've explained everything to you here.

DECIDE FOR YOURSELF

I thought with my own head, made comparisons, and figured it all out. You can too, if you want. This biorobot isn't designed for everyone to find out about it. In that case, it fights desperately, tormenting you even more, but you can get rid of it forever. How to defeat it is described in the chapter "How to fight this"

How could I find out

I was born in the USSR and grew up as an inquisitive boy, from childhood I was interested in astronautics, astronomy, space research, and science fiction. I remember that in the kindergarten I saw in the book a drawing of an "unknown star", in fact, just a dot in a circle, as if it was visible through a telescope. But then I was very captivated. Later there were children's books about space, the journal "Technique of Youth", then adults. They described promising engines for spaceships to reach the distant planets of the Solar System, presented plans for the development of resources, and promising projects of starships. The capabilities, cost, and complexity of such a project were evaluated. Alas, none of this happened. Moreover, with the collapse of the Soviet Union, promising developments were abandoned, even at the stage of almost complete readiness. I did not expect this, it was very disappointing. I also noticed that my peers, acquaintances, relatives, parents almost completely lacked interest in science, technology, they did not understand why space research was needed. On the contrary, they became close to the concepts of ignorance, quackery, interests became mundane, purely mercantile. I was struck by how in the late 1980s the population of the USSR massively rushed to build cottages in horticultural plots. It was like conquering virgin lands. Future gardeners were eager to cut down the forest, uproot stumps, carry and process logs, and in marshland, among the clouds of mosquitoes, without any human conditions, shops, pharmacies, clinics. Transport delivered them there very rarely and poorly. But that did not stop! It was necessary to build a house from logs or timber with your own hands. Plant bushes and fruit trees, a vegetable garden, potatoes. Some even died in their heroic impulse. Of course, the products of their production were not enough, and they had to carry almost all the food from the city. I did not understand this then, but now I understand that this is all degradation.

Unfortunately, my parents also willingly participated in this. And with all their might they tried to drag me there, arguing that I should help my elderly parents (50 years old). As a result, after the army I worked on their site for four summers in a row, each time a month and a half, almost all summer vacations. Moreover, all attempts to negotiate with them, to clarify that I do not need and are not interested, did not give results. There were endless scandals that it was necessary to go to the cottage, to help build it, it even seemed that the cottage was more important to them than their son. Complete misunderstanding, absolute misunderstanding in almost everything. I only later learned that I had lost in this way, and still regret that I did not send them to hell with this. But then I still could not imagine the scale of the disaster.

Mom and earlier, from childhood, attached overvalued importance to fresh air. Endlessly drove me out into the street, even in the evening, in the dark, when no one was there. I wandered alone in the yard with a flashlight. At the same time, I liked to read, and even tried to write science fiction myself, and every year the time for it became less and less. But mother, as if as soon as she saw me busy with her hobbies, I immediately urgently had to go for a walk. Or go with them stupidly out of town. Be sure to fresh air. No persuasion helped. Scandals, terrible insults, slamming doors. I didn't understand her at all, and now I understand that she was just bothering me then. She saw me becoming smart, and interfered as much as she could. As a result of such a path at the end for my parents, alas, complete degradation. Everyone says to me: what are you, they are old, but they are not old, they just rolled down. They did not even realize that they were interfering with their son. The saddest thing is that the mother fundamentally did not want to understand that her son was sick with something, for example, seasonal allergies, and being in the countryside during the flowering season, from May to mid July, was undesirable to me. Even the recommendation of an allergist was no argument for her. We must go to the country, and nothing is a reason for refusal! In the end, I suffered, constantly sneezing, scratching my eyes, swallowing piles of pills that caused drowsiness. But this did not seem to make any impression on her. Thus began a pathological conflict with his mother, which lasted a lifetime. She basically didn't want to understand anything, even that I was ill, and constantly demanded that I go for a walk and go to the cottage. Interestingly, a similar movement of summer residents was in Japan in the late 1990s. After that, the birth rate began to collapse and stagnation recently began of one of the most developed economies in the world. That is, processes similar to those that took place in Russia after the collapse of the USSR.

Even when I went to kindergarten, I had the first signs of myopia, although I had hardly read anything at that time. Over time, myopia only intensified, and in high school I was already forced to wear glasses. After graduation, myopia reached -5 diopters. Doctors told me the reason that I read a lot. In fact, now most young people are always looking at their smartphone, the size of the letters there is much smaller than in the book. And the number of shortsighted among them is much less than in my youth.

In childhood, I developed a chronic bowel disease, diagnosed at first as acute enterocolitis caused by infection. I recovered then. But I began to get fat quickly. Of course, the parents did not attach any importance to this. At 14, I realized that I didn't want to be fat anymore. And I began to lose weight, exercise. But I was not able to straighten the frail constitution that has developed since childhood. Apparently it was necessary to swing for hours, purposefully, like Schwarzenegger, but I did not have enough time and energy for this. Remained clearly visible consequences of the former fullness. In the institute years, bowel disease made itself felt again, by an attack of severe pain. Doctors did not understand anything and diagnosed gastritis. Fortunately, the exacerbation subsided pretty quickly. But the teeth began to become caries. I noted that they all fell ill in a strange way according to one principle: they began to collapse from the root. Often starting to drill a tiny hole, the doctor wondered how further everything was weakened and rotted. I had to drill a lot of teeth, each time pulpitis, canal filling, a huge filling, which later split the tooth in half. Due to the universally bad dentistry in Russia in the 1990s, without pain relief, I then lost a lot of teeth. This was all the more strange because in my school years I had almost no caries. I attributed all this to poor nutrition during military service, a lack of vitamins. Then I gained interest in medicine, I studied from books, what are the diseases and how to treat myself, which later came in handy in my life.

From early childhood, I did not tolerate a blood test from a finger. It was getting bad, and I did not understand why. It was very strange to me. From the vein - please, but from the finger every time almost fainting with a darkening in the eyes. A blood test in the Soviet era was prescribed for any runny nose, so it happened badly to me regularly. At the same time, I noticed that women who took this analysis often beat with a needle with all their might, and then pressed on the finger with all their might. Especially in the cold, it was often really hard to bear. Moreover, parents and relatives had nothing of the kind. I also noticed that women dentists, treating without pain relief, often started yelling, if I even started to twitch, what kind of man are you if you can't endure the pain! And I have sparks from my eyes. When, as I accidentally found out, they were treating their medical staff with a novocaine injection. Later I found out that torture using dental caries was practiced in the Nazi Gestapo during the Second World War. But it turns out I was not a man in the eyes of these women.

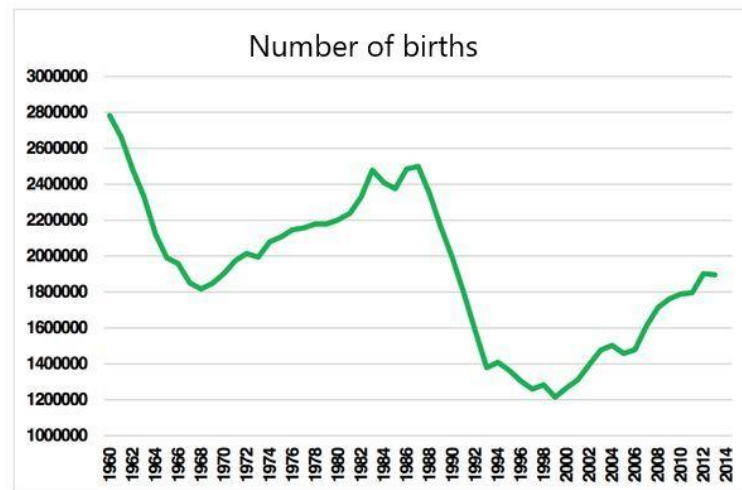

Then, when I had an allergy, regular nasal congestion formed. It became difficult to breathe, I wanted to clean it, it was especially difficult to fall asleep with a stuffy nose. As a result, I began to sit on vasoconstrictors. In my student years, I had an operation to straighten the nasal septum about this. For some time it was better, then the situation gradually returned again to the constant use of vasoconstrictors. The last trip to the ENT showed that this is due to inflammation of the canal going somewhere to the right side of the frontal part of the brain, and this can only be fixed with a surgical operation, which I did not do. It is interesting that during my military service I was not tormented by either allergies or nasal congestion, as I understand it now, this was due to the constant feeling of danger to life and health.

In high school, the teachers pounced on me. They asked so much homework that I literally had no free time. Six or seven lessons, then I would come home, have lunch and after a short break I would sit down to do my homework. Which I practiced until almost 11 pm, with a break for dinner and physical education, which I did at home. I was a diligent student, and secretly envied those who had the time to wander down the street in company and walk with girls. For me, such an opportunity was not provided. Moreover, I have the impression that teachers do this on purpose so that I do not have the opportunity to have a girlfriend. And even that they were all advised to overwhelm schoolchildren with work so that there would be no sex in adolescence. As I understand now, no one gave such an order, my teachers just went crazy, as did amateur gardeners later. It seemed incredibly important to them to teach their subject as much as possible. Moreover, more often than not, they gave all sorts of nonsense, which is not necessary to know. The last years at school seemed so boring to me that now I cannot remember them at all. School, home, lessons, and that's it. But these are the best years of my life! And these idiots took them away from me. But later, at the institute, the atmosphere was more free, and I breathed a sigh of relief. Finally, they left me behind. But there was another problem, at the institute I was taught a lot of things, except for the necessary. I never found where to apply this knowledge later in my work.

While serving in the army, I noticed a strange thing: when I was extremely tired, I could not correctly enter the events in the military journal. All the time he did it with mistakes, for which he received punches from colleagues. And I just couldn't manage not to do them, no matter how hard I tried. As if someone in my head was mocking me.

Even when I was in school, I noticed that I did not have a relationship with girls. One girl told me bluntly: "you are not from our company", which, I remember, surprised me very much, I did not understand why I am worse than others. At the same time, I have noticed more than once that they make indulgences to rude simple guys, but they do not forgive me anything. That is, they are deliberately biased. I did not understand this then, but I considered that they were simply not ready for a relationship. In my first year at the institute, I had an almost developed relationship with girls, I went on dates, but then I was drafted into the army. The army turned out to be a real nightmare, I actually encountered real criminals and prison unspoken laws there. I was not ready for this, because no one then said a word about it, the truth burst into the press later, when I returned. I also noticed that stupid freaks are typically very strong, they lift huge bars, they have a lot of energy for physical education. And I, despite all the efforts, did not manage to get in shape. I also felt constant tiredness, over which stupid freaks constantly made fun of. My peers - intellectuals, too, were frail, and could not resist the criminals. Alas, these two years of service turned out to be fatal for later life, and not at all because of the gopniks, I just did not know about it yet. When I returned, I felt happy. Finally, I was released from prison! Now everything will go as it should. Alas, everything did not go as it should. It turned out that all the girls of my course, as one, are indifferent to me and do not pay any attention. It seemed like they were not at all interested in relationships with the guys. The only thing they needed from me was for me to do a term paper for them. I remember it was very offensive. I did not know how to approach them and establish a relationship. Friendship with fellow students also did not work out. In the end, I felt terrible loneliness. Moreover, many of my acquaintances who did not serve in the army already had families and children were born. I stubbornly failed. I was not invited to the company, so I never managed to get to know a normal girl. It seemed to me that my friends were annoyed that I was addressing them with this problem of mine. At the same time, I was a pretty nice young man, fit, although not an athlete, not stupid and with a sense of humor, I could make a joke. And such a complete disregard by the girls was discouraging. A couple of times I made acquaintances, courted seriously, but they only "drove me". In general, there was a strange opinion about those girls of my youth. They seemed to carry out the program of their lives. Such a girl basically does not pay attention to anyone or anything, does not flirt, leaves home after school, does not seek anywhere, does not want any relationship, and this is evident. Then he often unexpectedly marries, having met someone somewhere out there. And again, nothing from her. At that time I did not imagine that problems in personal relations were growing for everyone, I thought that only for me. And only now it became clear how severe the decline was in this area of life. Indirectly, this can be judged by the schedule of fertility decline in the 1990s.

Then I thought, somehow it's all bad, a peaceful life, and there is no way to find personal happiness. And I did not imagine that in fact an invisible war was going on. Moreover, such behavior of women is the opposite of what would be logical from the point of view of evolution. With the increasing difficulties in life, they should have the opposite, strive to create families, give birth to more children, to be surrounded by care in old age and to overcome difficulties together with loved ones. Instead, women of my youth became very capricious, spoiled, dishonest, unfaithful, heartless, often began to behave immorally, without any regret or remorse.

At the same time, after a successful perestroika, as a result of which the economy collapsed, the USSR collapsed. My country, which was knowledge-intensive and technically developed, has perished. These reforms began, it seemed, reasonably enough, but Gorbachev turned out to be an incapable leader, and made an impression of a person deprived of his opinion, whose thoughts are floating. Yeltsin, who replaced him, at first seemed progressive and active, but suddenly he suddenly gave up, became ill, and began to behave like a clown. He abandoned everything, and as a result, the country's economy finally collapsed. What happened then no longer seems to be a powerful scientific and technical country. It even sometimes comes to mind that the current country is trying to simply deceive us with invented power, but in reality it no longer has its own science and its technologies. All this is window dressing.

In 1995, I got married, but, as it turned out, unsuccessfully. Suddenly, after the wedding, the wife became completely not sexual at all, she was no longer interested in sex and orgasm in general. Scandals started on her part, most often on far-fetched and deliberately biased reasons, which often continued at night, and bored me to the end. Absolutely absurd accusations, dissatisfaction with literally everyone, often with an inability to explain what exactly she does not like. Then she really couldn't explain herself why she did it. "Something happened to me". Sometimes she herself could not remember what she said and did. In 2001, a daughter was born, and his wife "postpartum depression" lasted six months. It was a real nightmare. Then I realized that such a family already makes almost no sense. Although the wife before the wedding seemed honest man, with the principles brought up in the family of the officer, and we had common interests. But it turned out that all this did not help.

And so, in 2003, unexpectedly for myself, I unhappily fell in love with one woman whom I met at work. At the same time, it seemed strange that not only was he not going to start anything like this, he was categorically afraid of such a feeling, suspecting, from past experience, that it would be unrequited, it hurts and that's all. And at first I did not pay attention to this woman at all. In appearance she was pretty, but somehow wilted, married, uninteresting. I felt an unexpected influx of feelings when I later corresponded by working with her by e-mail. About two weeks after the last time I saw her. I did not understand myself, because I thought that I was completely unprepared for this. And I still do not understand, why on earth is all this? The option is obviously a failure, it was understandable. But the feeling was not going to let go, it was not at all possible to get rid of it with reasonable arguments.

Therefore, I decided, most likely therefore, for divination with a needle. Recall the experience of his distant youth. Surprisingly, the difference from previous attempts, the contact was immediately meaningful. I answered a certain "Gosha". He said that this is "love, passion", "she loves you" and "wedding in a year". Still, that "this is a gift". It was impossible to believe in such a thing! I decided to check and began to correspond with this woman on personal topics, wanting to get to know her more closely. As expected, she did not feel anything but polite interest in me. Moreover, she didn't even want us to become friends. I guessed that she was just flirting with me, no more. How can a wedding be in a year? Naturally, no way. But my feeling, to my horror, was only growing. I decided to ask the astral again what is happening to me. The answer was strange: "this is conducting", "you are being led to it". So this story began. Of course, the relationship did not work out at all, the most reasonable thing was to abandon this ridiculous idea, but I continued to experience a strong attraction and strong feelings about this. And I could not do anything with myself, I could not distract myself. I tried again to get in touch, Gosha said: "everything is going fine". He also said that he has a "linus" that "helps conduct", he "builds" it, and this is something like a computer on tertiary logic. Once in the USSR they tried to do such things, and I was not very surprised, I only thought: where are the spirits, are the computers there?

After a while, it became clear that this woman has nothing to do with me. She was not eager to meet at least a little. Moreover, her interest in talking to me faded. I tried to get in touch with someone else, not Gosha. Someone called himself "Friend". He built phrases somehow very old-fashioned. For example, "add your mind?" On the topic of my feelings, he said interestingly: "I will find you a wife like a fool". He called Gosha "genius" and "beggar". At the same time, it began to seem to me that I was already distinguishing it directly that way, without the help of needle rotation. The worst thing is that my condition was getting worse. I was in a state of severe depression, generally lost interest in the family and everything in life. I was only thinking about why this did not work out, and now I cannot be happy without this woman. All attempts to pull herself together and throw her out of her head failed. Interestingly, when I occasionally saw her live, I was very surprised, because she outwardly completely did not match the way I imagined her in my head. Then I also tested the spiritualistic pendulum. Later - automatic writing. "Friend" said that this woman was "nicer for God" and further advised "to communicate with a guide". The guide's name was Gena. He said that we must go to God, and at the same time talked too old-fashionedly. For verification, I decided to call an "angel", or one of the higher beings. After all, it is believed that this is possible. The one who called himself "Augur" answered. He advised me to "run to God", and created some pleasant sensations reminiscent of euphoria. "Live in the truth", he wished me. This whole story ended poorly. My lover became pregnant from her husband, and was about to leave on maternity leave. In order to fully verify what was said to me from the astral, I confessed my love to her. Of course, it turned out that she had absolutely no feelings for me. And she did not plan any relationship with me. She only recently got married a second time and was quite happy with her marriage. It was very painful, and I did not understand why they made such a joke with me. The answer from astral was very entertaining, supposedly, she should return to my life, and then everything will be fine with us. It was not at all clear to me. Even if she returns in two years, what will it give me? My feelings suffered, and by that time I would no longer need her. At the same time, I realized that I could not love her anymore after she became pregnant from another man. It turned out that she might be coming back, but I will not need her at all. And even if she falls in love, then I will not need it at all, and the wedding will not take place. I did not know that this paradox would play a major role in solving this riddle.

In addition, I was very surprised by this woman herself, with whom I was so unhappily in love. I later watched her furtively through the Internet, and was amazed: her appearance regularly changed, she was thin and intelligent, then as if a market woman, then some kind of directly puffy. The face changed noticeably and sometimes even the figure, as it seemed, in a circle! I even sometimes thought that by mistake I didn't get to her page, but then I was convinced, yes, that's for sure she! As if in one woman there were several women at the same time, who changed in turn. She was sometimes just not recognizable! But then she strangely returned to her former form, a few years later. I think people just sometimes do not notice such mysterious changes, do not pay attention to it, considering it to be something ordinary. I still don't understand who this woman really was.

On the Internet I did not find any information that there are "conducting", especially to a woman. All descriptions of contacts with "spirits" were more like primitive superstitions. Purely for moral reasons, this did not fit with the way we imagine good deeds from above. My beloved at that time was married, and, it turns out, I had to take her out of the family, and abandon mine. The Church decries such contacts with the "spirits", considering them to be "lower demons", and assuring that they only lie. But I was interested in the phenomenon itself. I tried to go to church, pray, but it didn't help anything. At the same time, being in the temple did not affect these contacts in any way. What kind of god is this who made me lead to wild, unbearable pain? From Kabbalah I learned a strange theory, allegedly the creator created creatures that aspire to him, and he gives them suffering in order to purify their souls. And if you know in advance what he gives, which is possible through the "internal screen", then you can avoid suffering. You can still avoid this if you become the maximum egoist, so that, having fed up with everything, then become an altruist. A very strange god for Kabbalists, I thought. Some kind of moron who beats everyone who aspires to him, while he cannot even plainly say what he needs from them. Moreover, having become, in everything, an egoist, a person, in my opinion, is getting used to living this way, and will never become an altruist of his own free will. Somehow, everything is the opposite of what it should be.

I also stumbled upon a rather strange site "science of eniology", which described that spiritualism is for fools, and that the phenomenon that I encountered is called a "system of withdrawal of potential". The name, as it later turned out, made a point, but the rest of the content on the site was distrusting. That supposedly we have hostile alien civilizations standing at a higher level in some obscure hierarchy, they steal karma. It was incomprehensible to me in this case, and especially personally in mine: why do aliens need my karma? What will they do with her? I have never been particularly lucky in life. What is it to steal? Something did not fit here. Later, the site "science of eniology" was completely redone, and turned into one of the most typical corners of the occult-mystical direction. From the content of the forums, I realized that people often encounter this phenomenon, and even get very strange information in this way, but no one understands anything about it. And most importantly, they are not trying to figure out what is behind this.

So, I came across a strange phenomenon. It is not properly described anywhere on the Internet and in literature. The phenomenon in everything was not logical. What kind of "friends" are these, leading to a dead end to pain and suffering? What is the use of it? After all, they did not seem to be enemies! I have aroused scientific interest. What is it that turns out to be, the 21st century, it seems, the universe has already been almost studied, and here is a whole menagerie of all kinds of Gosha, Gena, Friends and other Augurs! Struck by their old-fashioned communication, Gena seemed to believe in God, but more like an Old Believer or a sectarian. He did not at all resemble the image of a guardian angel, which is described in the Christian religion. Naturally, then I had no idea where this is all located. I decided to find out what their world is. It turned out they themselves do not know where they are. I asked if they could reach for something or find something in their world. There was no answer, there was confusion. I was told that they could see the "arc", they still have some kind of "meridian", but that it was not clear. Gena suggested that the "arc" is a "collection of souls". An interesting presentation, but where is all this located? After my experiments, it began to seem to me that I heard "voices". It was not at all interesting. It was already crazy. In addition, I was very tired during this time, was experiencing severe depression, and realized that in this way I would not find out anything else. I need to wait and see if it will come true or not, and then draw conclusions about it. Therefore, I simply quit practicing spiritualism. But spiritualism has not abandoned me.

Further, I constantly pondered what happened to me, and began to dwell more and more often on the thought that since the "evil spirits" had such simple access to a person, they could harm him very easily in everything, like me. And there is no one to stop them, because I did not feel any external force that would drive them away when I asked for it. And for sure, they harm normal relations everywhere, persuade people, arrange their "conducting", and they don't even suspect about it. Such thoughts gave impetus to subsequent events. A "colloquium" began in my head with my participation, endlessly discussing these events. They tried all the time to deploy them this way and that, from a different angle, although, in my opinion, everything was very clear, and there was absolutely nothing to discuss here. Then, for the first time, the psychology of these creatures struck me — they claimed so that I did something bad if I did not want to go to this woman, to contact with her, to confess my love. I was also interested in the opinion of the "guide" about his god, from his words, God offers solutions, people make them. What about free will? - I was amazed then. Free will to make these decisions, answered the guide. Here is such a non-alternative god with them, go, love and suffer, because you see how he wanted to. Of course, if they just lied to me from the astral, and to hell with him. I could have been mistaken, but I didn't suffer much, considering it an absurd delusion, and finally I was simply surprised. But with such a level of tragedy that I experienced then, it is unlikely that this lie strongly influenced something. All this resembled the generally evil will of some more powerful being.

And so, one fine day, discussions became especially intrusive. I was very tired of it, but I was waiting for something important and interesting to be told to me. Toward evening, it got really bad, but I began to get very strange information in my head. Allegedly, this world is just an illusion, and now the walls will open, then the real world will open. It even seemed that this was starting to happen, but the walls remained where they were. Another thing is that we are all microcircuits on the substrate, and some kind of thing crawls on top, resembling a chandelier that clings to us with wires. I did not know anything about solipsism then, and all this was noticeably scary. Then, I remember, a voice appeared that said that I was in a difficult situation, and he will help me get out. To do this, I must perform simple steps. I need to look at the cross that really appeared on the wall, like an image. Then it was necessary to spin around himself, performing movements with his hands. Allegedly, military introductions were found in me, they must be pulled out and transferred to people from another planet. They will figure it out. Another report "line number", as I recall, 375. As a result, I felt very bad. My wife woke up, then an ambulance arrived and they gave me a calming injection. In the morning everything went. I told the doctors that I was just overworked. I did not know then that this was a real military attack. All this happened in the winter of 2004, and, of course, could be qualified as acute psychosis due to complicated loss.

An interesting feature of such fantastic illusions is the unusual sensations experienced by man, which are not like anything encountered in ordinary life. They cause associations with life after death, other worlds and it is very difficult to describe in words, because they do not associate with anything that surrounds us.

After this, one could naturally assume that it is better not to do all this, and to stay away from everything. I began to gradually recover from the tragedy, although I often suffered from bouts of severe hopeless depression, but I fought with them. Moreover, I did not understand what I was struggling with in the end. It already seemed to me that that woman was not very, and needed. Why am I suffering so much? She was pretty, yes, as it turned out, model in appearance, but long married, and now she has two children, she was completely indifferent to me, did not show any signs of special attention, did not flirt. Why am I so crush on her? She was no different from many other pretty women who surrounded me. But no, it is she who is needed, although the least chance is to achieve reciprocity with her. I suddenly need to become a millionaire out of the blue. And reciprocity, after her pregnancy, no longer seemed something necessary. I did not understand at all why I continue to be in a state of tragedy.

In the summer of 2004, I met a woman with whom I had a short romance, I also passed an exam for driving a car, it seemed to me that I was starting to get out of this terrible pit. I recalled my adventures cautiously, and no longer wanted to try to find out anything. In 2005, I met another woman with whom I had a longer relationship. But in the summer, at the very peak of this novel, I got an exacerbation of irritable bowel syndrome. I acquired this disease back in my college years. I went to the doctors, underwent various examinations, did not find anything significant, and for six months I got out of this situation. My nails on the big toes began to grow inwards. Previously, this also happened, periods, just at the moment when I most needed to be healthy. I cut my nails, and gradually healed them. Relations with that woman began to bore me, I did not love her. Therefore, in 2006 I met another woman who seemed outwardly more attractive. To my surprise, she quickly began to feel an unusually strong attraction to me. Then, again, sessions of "messages from above" began again. This time it was reported that "management" came to my aid, which was very interested in this woman, and "wants to look at her". Still unknown to me, said: "she is a weapon aimed at you". I did not understand this, but again it became interesting to me! Nothing like this anywhere in literature and on the Internet! Yes, today I know that mentally ill people often claim to "rule the world". Apparently, this is a kind of such nonsense. But then I didn't even think that I controlled anything! In addition, I was informed that there is someone who is being introduced into our world. These are some robots that "roll on a plane", and, "having discovered a hole, they see that it is a person, then they lower the reticle". In addition, a message slipped through that I was a robot that was lost on another planet, and I had a wheel behind. Then I sadly thought that it was possible, I have schizophrenia. And my unhappy love is also just a symptom of schizophrenia. I was also struck by the seemingly funny cartoon characters that appeared in consciousness at that moment, as if drawn. They showed something, as if helping me in something, but then it got worse. That is, they were the harbingers of the bad. In this system of relationships, it was the other way around, but I still hoped that at least someone was on my side.

The affair with another passion unfolded quite rapidly, and I stopped considering the seriously received warning. Suddenly, this woman began to offer me to have a baby, and get married. To me, she herself seemed a little strange, obsessed with work, not very suitable for hobbies, but passionately in love, which I had not felt from my wife for a long time. And just then, when we should have already had the final move to her, she began to behave incomprehensibly. She began to cry for no reason. I slowed down with the departure, but she put her husband out and was waiting for me alone. As soon as I was about to go, when she suddenly announced that she was returning to her husband. I reacted with surprise, but it did not become a tragedy. Basically, I heard about this behavior in such cases. The mistress takes the man away from his wife, and having achieved it, throws him herself. We seemed to part, but it seemed to me that she was expecting something from me. Without waiting for anything, she called and said that now she was with me again, and forever. Well, I, too, was bitterly abandoning the family, where my child, who was still in kindergarten then, I decided that such hesitation was normal. She changed her mind, so she still loves me! And so I was going to move to live with her, leaving my family behind. We had a very warm date then.

The next day I went to work, and then to the programming courses, which I started to attend at the same time. Another day, problems came again. A constant discussion of this all in my head, plus any nonsense resembling a booth. If I knew then that this is the second military attack, two years after the first, then I would go home and go to rest. But I did not know! Nowhere on the Internet is a word written about it. Everything intensified gradually. Already at the courses, it seemed to me that there was an empty space around me, and behind me there was a military man in a blue helmet that protects me, and this was accompanied by very unusual pleasant sensations. Then I was informed that "the control machine will solve my problem". Before me, on a blank sheet of paper, drawings began to appear, as if animated cartoons in the form of drawings. It all came together in a drawing of a strange apparatus resembling a samovar with a porthole, it was called the "module". As I understand it, the task was to turn the "module" into a baby for some reason, which was done. In this drawing ended. On the way home, an unreasonable laugh began to sort me out. Then, already near the house, I was informed that it was necessary to stop somewhere and do a series of exercises. So I stood for a while, convulsively twitching, then my wife came out and brought me home. At home I felt very bad. My thoughts were confused, but they began to impose on me that there were "controls" around me, one of which, "sur", or "suprimator", was trying to drive me crazy. This is a military mechanism, and is built somewhere in space, it affects me from above. It began to seem to me that my wife wears a mask on her face, and pretends to be another person. As a result, the ambulance came again, they gave me an injection. Hallucinations ended the next day, but problems with a full return of consciousness continued for some time. This was the most serious failure, caused by overwork, and because of the anxiety that I was leaving my family, I did not sleep at night. All this seems nonsense, in fact, these are elements of the swaying of the human psyche to drive him crazy. Such a military attack begins unexpectedly, growing gradually, and at the end becoming a terrifying delirium with hallucinations of obedience to the "voice". But then I did not attach serious importance to this, believing that I myself was to blame for the occurrence of these symptoms.

Despite the delay caused by my malaise, the mistress again invited me to live with her, although the delays continued for a month, and she lived alone, and this seemed a reliable argument in favor of her loyalty. At the same time strange "messages" began to come to me that somewhere an investigation had begun of what was happening, in connection with what had happened to me. Somewhere "the police arrived". I did not understand anything then. Schizophrenic nonsense again, I thought about it. The situation at home became very painful, my wife became addicted to alcohol, drank every evening with friends, not paying attention to me, so I went to live with another. I then doubted strongly that I had made the right choice, but the old relationship, as I thought, had already completely exhausted itself. I decided to try it. As soon as I moved to my bride, she abruptly changed. Sex stopped immediately. She was surprised to note the mysterious smell emanating from the body, which she could not interrupt with aromatic oil. This smell reminded me of incense. And in general, it was very gloomy together with her, the situation was oppressive. Unnatural, somehow hypocritical, as if a theater was being played in front of me. After a while, when I was going to introduce her to my parents, she behaved very strangely. She didn't want to go, she sat and was silent, as if in a stupor. As a result, I went alone, my mother had a birthday. My parents did not support me with the idea of divorcing and marrying another. Toward night, my bride sent an SMS, with grammatical errors, that she was returning to her husband, and I could pick up my things. Previously, she always wrote without errors. I took things and decided to temporarily stay with my parents. I only suffered one evening from this, then I thought that I would gladly give up her husband with such a "gift" with similar deeds. But then she behaved very strangely. She invited me to a meeting in a cafe, and sat there with a proud look, as if she had made some achievement in her life. And again she was waiting for something. I did not understand her mood, and even more so the question "so what?" Nothing, probably. Enough! I was completely uncomfortable living with her. I decided that I would part with her for good. But after some time, already at work, realizing that for me actually everything was over, and she was no longer interesting, she rushed to the attack. And I was surprised to note how a person, she completely changed. Previously, she did not allow me to touch myself in the presence of other people. Now she hugged me in the presence of strangers, was almost ready to have sex with me when other people were nearby. Having made a couple more times an attempt to leave and return, it seemed to me, she went crazy. Sometimes it was as if she didn't understand where she was and who she was with. She is with me forever, and at the same time her husband will catch me with her! She began to dress like an old woman. An incomprehensible mucky mucus flowed from the vagina. I was generally scared with her! What happened to her then, I still don't understand, most likely, she had previously suffered from schizophrenia in a latent form or even a disorder of a multiple personality, in a latent form. But, when we met at the beginning of our relationship, I did not notice any such manifestations. A neat, clean and neatly dressed, pretty young woman, reasonably reasonable, businesslike, active, she lost her mind for no apparent reason and turned into something terrible. It seemed to me that she was actively trying to make me hurt, so she made such strange maneuvers. She was waiting for this. Probably pain in the eyes. I did not understand this at all.

But the culmination of this relationship was SMS correspondence with her, as with a "robot". At first she, after several of her strange maneuvers, sent a round-trip SMS containing only the numbers "123". I did not answer, considering it some kind of mistake. After a while, again, "123". It turns out, as "management" explained to me at that moment, that still means something. I need to answer "RVM", this is a "request for a control mechanism". Sent, the answer came "N85". "Robot" called himself. I was a little taken aback then, but I wondered what all this meant. I answered "under the guidance" from my head what exactly, I don't remember, in my opinion, out of place, this code language is quite difficult to understand, but the answers were stored in my phone for a long time, as a sample of correspondence with no longer human: GUQN, WAU, RPC, OEEE, YE, YVN, BURR, MEO, AY. What does this mean, I will not say now. For each code there was one SMS message. Then separate words began to come, and I did not answer anymore, again one word to the message: Bacon, Socks, Color, Bottle, Groshiki, Gragg, Kum, Trum, Mole, Wozik, ZaelO, Tryam, Straight, Percentage, Verification, Black . Closer to the night another SMS message containing only one strange word came: Grmmmtk. What happened to the person himself, I still do not understand. How did she manage to get so crazy? What she imagined herself to be a robot! And we met later, she did not remember this moment, and never mentioned, looked more or less sane, never tried to repeat this. But from that moment on, all silliness came from her, like from a child. I did not understand her at all, I just tried to play along, pretending that everything was in order. We still met sometimes, but without enthusiasm and plans for the future. By the fall of 2007, she became pregnant from her husband, and we parted forever, without much regret on my part. This mysterious, in its own way, relationship history clearly demonstrates that a lot of extremely strange is hidden in the bowels of the human psyche, and we know very little about it. Moreover, this extremely strange something has similar combinations among different people, which is even more mysterious. It's as if these "robot" codes were tightly flashed somewhere.

When I was still meeting this woman, at the very beginning of 2007, the stage of "revelation from above" began. Now they told me directly about the "events" that were taking place at that time. Doctors consider this a fantastic nonsense for a mental disorder, completely not trying to figure out what is behind it. It began with the fact that they directly told me: "most of what you see in the sky is artificial structures". Not only is this statement immediately in doubt. Of course, I personally have not been there, and no one has been beyond the borders of the Solar System, but as I knew earlier, there are mainly stars, galaxies, and nebulae. And I myself could not think that these are all artificial buildings! My opinion was completely different. What started next told about the mysterious events that were going on, and at first I could not understand where all this is located. I thought it was right here on Earth. At first, they told me a story that supposedly people began to leave along street lamps and disappear there. And they still could not pass the light bulb in their entrance. They stopped and stood looking at her. They missed the last metro station on the train, and disappeared there, too, at the end of the stop, turning into homeless people. I didn't notice anything like that. So this is not happening here. But where? Gradually, it became clear that they were describing some other planet. And she was extremely interesting! At first, I even thought that this is life after the death of people, as many believe, and I learn about it, and when I realized that this was just the management of earthlings from outside, I was very disappointed. But what they told me turned out to be excitingly interesting! Nothing of the kind can be found either on Earth or in our fiction!

The life of these aliens is completely different from ours, and is built on completely different principles. They have literally everything controlled there. The life of the population there is completely subordinate to the routine given by some devices installed everywhere, in the walls, on poles, in shops on each counter. They not only perform the functions of control and suppression, but also determine how a resident should behave so as not to suffer. The fact is that everyone there is under the constant influence of control fields. Their nature remained unknown to me, but, unlike us, aliens in their bodies themselves have built-in control devices that grow with them. Therefore, they cannot disobey. Even when a resident was dying, this organ was removed, and it looked like grain. And it was used in technical devices. Something like our Bluetooth, but directly embedded in the spinal cord, or somewhere in a similar place. Nothing extraordinary, but the idea itself on our Earth has no analogues. The reason for this state there is that the world shown to me is there at the lower level of submission, and higher beings live on the side of the mountain, higher and higher, in limited areas called "axial symmetries". Each "axial symmetry" has certain properties defined by the planet. And this planet therefore has several magnetic poles. Their features often differ so much that residents of one "axial symmetry" cannot stay for long on another, for example, the neighboring one, because they will receive other influences. Therefore, territories bounded by "axial symmetries" are called "planets" there. One such ball can contain several "planets" with unique natural features, each within a limited territory. As it became clear, this described planet was remade by someone in very distant times, billions of years ago. The lowest level experiences maximum impacts, which are often not interconnected. Therefore, in order to avoid distortions, we built a joint management that has feedback that allows you to correct the negative effects on neighbors. Because of this, military conflicts often arose there. People on Earth, it turns out, are still at a lower level than the inhabitants of the lowest territory, but they are not completely subordinated to these influences. To us, all this is simply transmitted in the form of instructions and images to the subconscious. How?

I was even given a technical description of this, though not very believable. But they told an impressive epic about the history of this planet. In ancient times, billions of years ago, an ancient galaxy was built, on the principles understood by people. She was beautiful and consisted of millions of inhabited worlds, connected by invisible connections among themselves. The most developed ones helped the less developed to develop faster. But then the planets gradually began to diverge from the expansion of the galaxy, the old civilizations ended, for various reasons, there were only a few branches where life still remained. But about two billion years ago, builders arrived from another galaxy, who did everything on principles incomprehensible to man. Unlike people who first debug solutions, then apply, the aliens built right away, but they had special devices and methods called "correctness control". This allowed them to do everything on the go, and with jewelry accuracy. But after almost a billion years of normal existence, strange problems arose. Someone noticed that decisions coming from developed worlds, in particular, helping in something concrete, connected together, lead to a worsening of the situation. Thus began the first strange war between the worlds, ending with the devastation of the galaxy. Therefore, the modern galaxy, which arose a long time after the end, was rebuilt, and only studied artifacts and methods left by distant unknown aliens. The method of war of "friendly help" was inherited with them, when under the guise of scientific, technical, and social support, decisions are introduced in advance that together give a weakening of the enemy's power, and only then an attack is carried out. The main thing is to do this unnoticed so that the enemy does not guess. The types of waging such a war can be varied. For example, a seemingly harmless flower is planted, which does not affect health in any way, and it spreads across the territory of the enemy. But in symbiosis with the flora growing there, it can cause a reduction in the birth rate of the population and its weakening, which, of course, they are not aware of. A bet is always on surprise. Therefore, wars in that world always began with the fact that everyone was trying to figure out who was attacking? All friends at once, no one is fighting, these are some mistakes that they will willingly help to correct. It was argued that the ancient civilizations that lived on that planet reached the limit of immorality, because they themselves were dying out. And they fought with the enemy only in this way, still often exposing other nations as enemies instead of themselves.

What does this have to do with me? It turned out that through this whole world the so-called "old axis" passed along the river descending from the mountain. Its peculiarity was that by putting certain objects in a certain place, it was possible to give a task to the inhabitants of the subordinate territory. Initially, this can be used with impunity. But then someone thought of using it for impossible tasks for residents. Therefore, the axis was redone. The one who set the task was now obliged to be responsible for its implementation. That is, to die if it is not fulfilled. This was recorded in his personality. But after some time, a way of earning appeared, when someone set the task, and received money on it, and when the time came, he was obliged to return the taken. If he did not return what he took, then he perished himself. There were those who set themselves up like that for money, becoming a "thief", and living only until the moment it was necessary to return what was taken. Therefore, the axis was redone again. Now the people living on it were obliged to control the fulfillment of the task. If it is not fulfilled, the rush began to fulfill it. This was sometimes impossible. In this case, the responsible leaders from the people, who were obliged to oversee the implementation, themselves experienced serious anguish. It was tightly stitched in them that the task should be completed at all costs. That is, they were responsible for fulfilling with danger to their lives. Even if the victim died, and for a long time, it did not matter, the task had to be completed. Therefore, instead of doing it, they often just searched for the guilty, who did it, found and killed. Now no one dared to do something like this without control systems that gave confidence that everything was done correctly. But again, there was a way to capitalize on this. Other nations bribed residents so that they framed their leaders, setting an impossible task for the subordinate people. In an effort to complete the task, they usually started a war with lower people if they refused to obey. So the strangers constantly made mischief between these peoples. To correct this situation, the so-called "old management" was invented, which pulled out those who participated in the statement of the task and allowed to find the culprit. Later, they made a general management, which controlled the setting of such tasks and allows timely correction of this situation, avoiding serious problems. But relations between nations deteriorated over time, and they could no longer just directly agree on who does what. This made the life of lower nations very difficult. To correct the introduced effects, special units of a rather large size, called "compensators", were built. They could create influences leveling destructive influences from another axis. To determine the implicit tasks from the neighbors in an understandable form, special biological objects were created, built in certain places, called "bio-formulators". In them, artificially derived life forms transformed the effects of other axes into formulations that could be understood. But this was not enough if the "movement" began. This was the name of a natural phenomenon that everywhere intensified the activity of the "axis of symmetry", and was accompanied by volcanic eruptions and river spills. At such moments, control devices gave residents direct commands, not only how to behave, but also what to think about. The "movement" occurred approximately once every 10 years.

What happened in my case? For a long time no one used this method, because modern control methods made it possible to instantly find the culprit and correct the situation. But the economic situation in the modern form of the small states living in the territories of these "symmetries" gradually fell into decay. And they completely forgot about this method of warfare. To remedy the situation in the economy, a "consortium of four planets" emerged, a suspicious commercial organization most resembling a criminal syndicate. Instead, she took up the "study" of ancient artifacts on the axis, and in the end she set this task, which for strange reasons everyone missed. It was revealed only when the task was given a second time. Allegedly, the impossible task to fall in love with a woman who creates an insurmountable obstacle to relationships, set for the people at the lowest level of the hierarchy. But it also proceeded here to certain comparable types of earthlings. Actually, the locals did not care about earthlings, but in order to avoid a war between their inhabitants, an investigation began. Then the police arrived at the building of the consortium (the same "policemen"), but the police were put out of the door. After that, special forces arrived and took control of the building. It turned out that there was some kind of biological disaster, and all the employees in this building went crazy. The first pictures "from another planet" that I received were soldiers sitting in a building in helmets and respirators that looked like a starfish. Crazy people run along the corridors. These inhabitants looked like people in appearance. Later it became clear that all biological objects that were supposed to determine the threat were infected as a result of sabotage. The investigation revealed glaring facts of corruption in the local government, which knew everything and did nothing. The trial began, who attacked. The second video "from another planet" showed how the military, who landed on the neighboring territory, found some devices in the roots of the trees. And then some kind of machine works in the field, in the form of a tower with a rotating torus. It looks like an unearthly car. There are no such machines on Earth. But there was a hitch with all this. The devices turned out to be just a service for rare tree species. And the car is agricultural. Standardly, no one is fighting, all friends.

Further, all the stories reminded me of reports from the places of hostilities. This planet turned out to be mysterious, filled with some ancient structures and technologies. And the story itself was most reminiscent of a fantastic horror thriller. I even regretted falling asleep from fatigue, and missed the next "report". They continued while I was sleeping, and then the information was never repeated later. The reports were conducted in a "voice", the pictures came in the form of pseudo-hallucinations. Sometimes they were colored, but most often black and white or even painted, like illustrations in a book. Three or four times there were propaganda military videos and fragments from "alien films". They did not look like typical production of terrestrial film studios. An interesting feature of the "other world" was its similarity to the USSR in the 1950s and 1960s, sometimes even in the 1920s and 1930s. And it seemed very strange. The same architecture, decoration, typical character - a worker in overalls and heavy boots, as on the posters of that time. I have never seen cars in the streets. Phones and computers too. All houses in the towns are one-story or two-story. An interesting system of water drainage from the roof was made; it is inside the building, next to the stairs. In winter, it thaws from the heat of the room and is easy to clean. Apparently, the winter there is not severe. There is a metro in a big city, it is different from ours. The train goes in a tunnel where water can get, so at the entrance to the station it passes through a valve. First, passengers leave it, and then a passage opens for those waiting to land. There are transfer stations that do not have access to the street, and you can get stuck there at night. In the small cities of this nation, trains in tunnels for delivering workers travel on a different principle. A cable is stretched along the rails, which is constantly stretched by a stationary winch. The locomotive clings to it with a special grip and is towed. To turn to the side, the driver releases the cable and transfers the capture to another cable. Maybe somewhere on Earth this is, but I have not seen. Some metro stations are flooded and abandoned.

There were stories that simply staggered the imagination. For example, initially the information looked like this: "when a person dies, he becomes a coil, gets into the house, and stands, a car drives up to him and starts to unwind him, he talks about himself, tells, then unwinds all". Awesome life after death! In fact, it turned out that this was talking about a special apparatus reminiscent of our old wire recorder. He writes down there all the actions performed by the "axial system" for a resident of a certain type. In the event of his death, under mysterious circumstances, it is examined and determined that this preceded it. A special kind of impact on residents is the "dead". This is one in which a person is killed by external influence. He walks, eats, talks, but he is very unpleasant in communication, and does nothing fundamentally. The massive presence of "dead" in all responsible posts is defined as a military attack. This is the structure of the subordinate world, he constantly watches what is happening to him, whether they attack him from above, dictate his own rules to him, or not. This plot is interesting because I had heard about a wire recorder before, but I never saw it live! And moreover, all the time before my eyes from childhood there were reels with magnetic tape. It would be logical to assume that if my subconscious mind came up with this device, relying only on my usual knowledge, it would show something like a tape recorder for old electronic computers, which at one time were used to store information.

The robot that got lost on another planet, which I mentioned earlier, rode there on rails. It was a service mechanism, engaged in servicing a biological object, it got into some kind of slush during the accident and got stuck. On its hood there really was a wheel, most likely a spare. The robot rolling along the plane and "finding the hole where the person is" turned out to be a special garden mechanism working on the "axis", thus identifying places that are associated with a resident of a certain type, and, accordingly, with an earthling. There, a special plant is planted in the hole, by which you can track what is happening. It was just so strangely recognized by a biological object that was used to reconnoiter what was happening in the neighbors, which also manifests itself in it as an image that needs to be identified and linked to something real. Why did the information about this come to me in such a strange way earlier? What am I - this is a robot that got lost on another planet? This is a way of military intelligence. The resident is informed that he is someone or something, from a biological object of observation, through a matching device called a "bridge", while the message looks silly, childish, because the rationality of this object is small, he is always at risk of destruction. Then it is monitored from which places something can affect this resident. This is what war looks like on another planet. Enemies always attack from higher levels in the hierarchy, often in order to complete some tasks from an even higher level. It's always unexpected and mean, it's the norm there.

Another interesting way of reconnaissance is that all objects recognized in this way are assigned the character of a resident. It doesn't matter what it is, whether it is alive or not. What matters is not what he is, but what he "said". So you can describe any action performed by any object, even a cartoon character, even a toilet bowl. Someone said something - typical information coming from a biological object.

An interesting feature of another territory that we managed to see, called the "old world" there, is the "old management". It looks like domes with strange mechanisms inside. It was alleged that when a resident of this territory dies, they put him in a chair inside this mechanism, and the dead partly comes to life by the mechanism, experiencing pleasant sensations, he can see and correct something if he feels some dangerous effects on himself. "New management" there is based on moving mechanisms, robots, computers, crystals, imperfect biological forms, artificially grown, but no one in this world ever trusts him. Often it does something, and no one understands that.

The story ended with an apocalyptic ending. The spill of the rivers was accompanied by the flooding of territories, the release of toxic waste from chemical industries. Then, along with a stream of water, some kind of chemical or biological substance came that decomposed organic substances and even metals as quickly as possible. All residents caught in the wave of this substance were instantly destroyed, including children. However, they did not understand anything that was happening to them, and continued to live, as usual. Surviving surrendered. The war was lost. At this point, the story of the war on "another planet" stopped. In this case, the finale could be interpreted in different ways. Either someone defeated and destroyed everyone in this territory. But from what was shown, this was not obvious. Either the war ended, and the accident just happened. And in general, former opponents eventually engaged in a struggle with its consequences.

The story about the events on the "other planet" lasted three years, from 2007 to 2010. At the same time, I retained full sanity, I could take care of myself, I went to work, as usual, only got very tired of these "visions". But I was extremely interested! What was shown was completely different from what we are used to on Earth. A complete illusion was created that there was a report on real events somewhere. The story was surprisingly detailed, believable, logically linked, with philosophical overtones, reminiscent of the parable of how a developed civilization had all the means to develop, but spent them on subordinating their own kind. It was a complete feeling that I watched the most interesting and exciting science fiction film in my life with an adventure plot! I have not seen anything comparable in level of fantasy here and have not read anywhere! Least of all did it resemble delirium caused by a disturbance in my thinking.

As you can see, a serious theoretical foundation was put under what happened to me earlier. Allegedly, the problems are somewhere on another planet, and this explains everything. But I did not believe it. I am familiar with cosmology and astronomy, and I am well aware that it is extremely difficult to bring information here from another planet near another star, especially to the brain. In my opinion, this is technically impossible, given the fact that those who transmit it here know practically nothing about us. At the same time, it always looked like that directly from there the information gets here, into my mind, but I did not see either transmitters or repeaters along the route of this signal to Earth. And I don't know a single signal that could transmit images, all the more color, directly to the human brain. Therefore, it remained to assume that all this was formed right in my head, and nothing more than a hoax. In fact, this is military misinformation of someone who accidentally witnessed something and tried to figure it out. In my case, it was unsuccessful, because I did not believe all this. Interesting, of course, but alas, not true.

ALL SIMILAR REVELATIONS IN THE HISTORY OF HUMANITY - NOT MORE THAN MYSTIFICATION!

The most important question remained: who in my head, acting so that I didn't notice anything, was able to compose a complex and full of details connected story? She was not only interesting, but also talented! I myself could not have composed such a thing, for a very simple reason. Each science fiction writer relies on the experience that he sees around himself. Therefore, in books and films, aliens are very similar to us, earthlings. They may just look different. To draw a completely different civilization, which is completely different from ours, is extremely difficult, almost impossible! Moreover, earlier in my mental fantasies I did not go further than describing the flight of a spaceship to another planet or star, which is completely typical of this genre. I never thought that they could control us from another planet, and I reasonably believe that this is impossible! Moreover, as it seemed to me, this story was played out, like in a theater or in a movie, according to some rigidly laid down script, which then did not modify and could not be continued. The last shots from this story more closely resembled terrestrial landscapes, and not from that fictional "planet". That is, in fact, some kind of "film", or a hard-laid program that played this hoax, scrolled, and that's all, it was never repeated again. Most likely, having worked once, it can never be initiated again. A good plot for science fiction, but these "aliens" had nothing to do with reality.

Psychiatry refers to such manifestations simply and bluntly. These are manifestations of a mental illness, most often diagnosed as schizophrenia. It is convenient in that everything strange about the symptoms that the doctors do not understand can be dumped into it. Moreover, medicine knows almost nothing about the causes and mechanisms of schizophrenia. Treatment is done at random. Most often, through heavy psychotropic drugs, the patient's consciousness is "submerged" to such an extent that the symptoms are smoothed out or stopped. But to live that way is impossible. Doctors still miss an important point: the patient's consciousness can remain full, not damaged, something just bothers him, creating various hallucinations. As far as I understand, research in this area is currently not conducted, almost all work remains in the field of classification of symptoms and "treatment" at random. Psychiatry as a whole is the most backward area of medicine, which still remains largely in the concepts of the Middle Ages, operating with bare guesses and leaving everything to the opinion of the attending physician. There are no reliable laboratory methods for determining schizophrenia as a disease, this is done by a psychiatrist, focusing only on the similarity of symptoms, that is, by "aiming at the boot". Such an attitude, devoid of scientific methods, gave rise to a whole protest movement called "antipsychiatry".

In 2007, to my surprise, I noticed a lot of strange manifestations in the reality surrounding me. All the walls of the metro station suddenly became scratched with strange patterns. These were not obscene inscriptions, as you might expect. Strange characters, formulas, inscriptions in an incomprehensible language without meaning, drawings of some robots, circles, drawn into sectors. The same drawings appeared on the train windows. Something happened in 2007, some kind of mass insanity. Which may indicate a coordinated nature of such actions. I already knew then that this was a war, but I did not understand who was fighting with whom. Now these drawings have been mostly removed by polishing, and the glasses have been replaced. There were many unusual plots in computer games, with elements of what I saw in my "revelation" about another planet: in a provincial town, soldiers suddenly appear who do not understand anything and shoot at all. Own armed forces are unexpectedly very weak and can't fight back, and in general often come across those who are armed and equipped exactly like their own, and look almost identical, but for some reason they are fighting for the enemy. Suddenly, once, an atomic explosion, and no one understands why this happened. Typical events for the "other planet", which I was shown during the "revelation". Back in 2007, strange feature films were released, as if shot by crazy people, telling the story about what it was.

In 2008, my co-workers attacked me in concert. One of them, with whom I had been friends, suddenly stated that I had to work for him for free. I naturally refused, and he began to take revenge. He began to persuade others against me. It was unexpected and seemed unmotivated. I went with this to my boss, but he surprised me by doing everything so that I would obey this type, although he was without a senior position and generally from another department. Having received a clear refusal from me, the boss tried to issue an order about it, for which he was removed from office the next day because he managed to violate labor laws. This was the first "kamikaze", which paid with his position to do a dirty trick to me personally. Before that, he seemed sweet and sympathetic, with a gentle character, and many would consider such behavior quite illogical. After that, they repeatedly tried to arrange sabotage and wrecking acts against me, until I found those who do this. They turned out to be my colleagues. Why they needed this remained a mystery, but since then I have been surrounded by cautious hostility from those whom I had previously considered almost my friends. Now nothing surprises me.

After the end of the fantastic story of revelation, for a long time, two years, the symptoms of auditory hallucinations continued. As a result, there was a partial dissociation of my personality, which was divided into three incomplete personalities, two of which work in one bundle, this is me, and the third is completely independent, and basically it interferes. It is felt on the right and behind, as if a separate person were sitting. Sometimes he expresses his opinion and even resentment, but can never tell definitely what is happening and does not answer direct questions. As I understand it, it is a partially rational executive element of a part of a person's consciousness that is completely inaccessible to him. It is he who "palm off on ideas". A patient with schizophrenia sometimes argues with him, as with someone who is nearby. There is also a symptom of "someone steals thoughts", in fact, this element simply interrupts the train of thought, getting in with its idea, and the thought is lost. If you wait, then the lost thought most often comes back from memory after some time. Surprisingly, it never occurred to psychiatrists that hallucinations and other symptoms in patients with schizophrenia and other mental illnesses are generated by completely independent elements of consciousness, but do not seem to the patient at all, being his sick fantasies! Simply put, "voices in the head" is really someone's conversation, not a pure illusion or fantasy! It is not the curiosity of psychiatrists that sometimes simply amazes the imagination. For years, they recorded and classified, diagnosed, but no one made any conclusions about the nature of these symptoms. "The head is a dark subject and cannot be treated". So I decided to forget about what happened to me, as it was some kind of technical failure. They showed me something wrong, and I did not understand what it was.

During this period, I realized that in order to win a woman, you need a "gentleman's set", that is, money, my own apartment, or at least a car. Otherwise, even a mistress will not be interested, so I could not find anyone. Before that, I had never been interested in driving, it seemed to me unsafe, and the topic itself was not interesting. Therefore, I decided to study a seriously new programming language for me, pass exams, and get another job. Surprisingly, it turned out to be difficult to accomplish. My cognitive abilities suffered after the "revelation" session, and the material was very poorly remembered. In addition, he seemed very boring, abstruse and it turned out to be unusually many. But I stubbornly continued to study, already hoping to simply study all of this and become independent of labor market fluctuations. As a result, I noticed that the discussions in my head about the story that I had been told for three years began to be intrusive. Moreover, sometimes this "third person" behaved like a passenger displeased with everything in a car. He twitched, as if trying to dodge something, and even "tried to get up and leave". Of course, he could not leave, he was firmly fixed in me, but was designated as part of my body. Sometimes it looked like a "furious hat" on my head, or a "furious cape" on my back. Doctors attribute this to senestopathies, that is, sensations on the skin that are always declared by the same symptoms of the disease, and what causes them is not interesting to them.

In 2011, I started having unexpected problems with urinating. Urine poured in huge quantities, I constantly wanted to go to the toilet. I was tormented by the syndrome of incomplete emptying of the bladder, sometimes I just couldn't get to work. It seems that I just went to the toilet, and again I want to, and pouring in liters. I was amazed at the amount of liquid pouring out of me, I was constantly thirsty. Doctors diagnosed me with prostatitis and began to treat. The treatment did not give any results, as a result, they began to shrug. I had to be treated myself. By constantly douching a decoction of herbs and antiseptics into the urinary tract, it was possible to reduce the desire to run to the toilet. I also gradually learned to completely empty the bladder, draining the remaining urine, although it was quite difficult and painful. Medicine, as always, helped me nothing.

As a result, I began to feel bad, to feel very tired, having difficulty learning new material. I began to go to neuropathologists in various paid clinics, trying to find the reason. I did not trust psychiatrists, and I do not trust to this day. Something was wrong with them, those whom I visited by necessity during the early problems looked strange. Neurologists did not attach the symptoms that I described to serious significance. I was diagnosed with osteochondrosis, although they sent me to do tests. But in the end they prescribed a soothing ointment for the neck. Naturally, this did not help me. Symptoms only worsened. In addition, it seemed to me that my "neighbors" did not like that I was studying programming, and they made noise again. And then the moment came when they gave me all kinds of illusions that they play the pipes, whistle, rattle, shout. Like in the Middle Ages. It was very hard. I did not understand then that this was the third military attack, and felt that I still had obvious schizophrenia. And I have to put up with it. And all that was with me before this, a failure in the subconscious, caused by the disease. The subconscious is simply more complex than scientists think.

The most difficult moment came in the fall of 2012. I went to the sanatorium, where I had a good rest, went through a series of procedures for the restoration of the nervous system, but in October I felt very bad. It was unbearably hard. At the same time, I often heard during monotonous sounds, for example, buzzing, as if classical music was playing somewhere or the arias from the opera were singing in a monotonous male voice. But I did not find the source, it was worth changing my location, and the singing stopped. I went to the doctor and they gave me a sick leave, pointing my head at the MRI. The doctor then again did not find anything serious, but I was getting worse. Problems were localized in the upper part of the right occipital region of the head. It felt like there was not enough air, it was impossible to breathe. An ambulance was called. An ambulance brought me to the hospital and left. Doctors in the admission department examined me, but found nothing significant, in their opinion, and sent me home, advising me not to turn my head. Despite my complaints that I feel very bad. They argued that there were no seats, although the ambulance dispatcher said that there were places, and even a few. I barely reached back, I thought that I would die at night. Fortunately, I survived, but it was very bad. Gradually I was released, I came to my senses, I went to another doctor, and he was struck by the fact that other doctors before him did not find obvious symptoms of a serious illness, chronic cerebrovascular insufficiency. Moreover, such a conclusion was not difficult to draw directly from the results of early diagnosis, it was practically written in an explicit form! But many doctors now do not know how! They put something typical, for example, osteochondrosis or prostatitis, and you go with it. As I understand it, I had a severe attack, almost a stroke, and I miraculously survived. Then I was ill for almost a year and a half, I was recovering slowly. I went to work, but half a year for a part-time week. Treatment typically did not produce results, it turned out that medicine in this case has no real solutions, almost all drugs with an unconfirmed effect. Nothing helped me. It turned out that in this case, doctors fundamentally refuse the patient. Neither sick leave nor disability can give him. And you deal with it yourself, as you want. Typically, the doctor does not listen to the patient at all, but treats only according to the results of the diagnosis and in his opinion. Many are under the illusion that our medicine is powerful and will cope with any problem, and it is almost unable to do anything, ineptly miss any dangerous disease, and then can not help in a threatening situation. The salvation of a drowning man, the work of himself. It became clear that a prolonged stay in a state of "revelation", as well as communication with "spirits", causes a chronic lack of cerebral circulation, most likely due to an overload of auxiliary appendages that form it, which can be dangerous to health. Naturally, nothing was written about this anywhere.

After this difficult moment, all the symptoms of a mental disorder practically disappeared. There were no more voices, no images in the mind, no movement of the skin on the head. The calm period lasted eight years, which refuted the diagnosis of schizophrenia. In severe schizophrenia, an increase in symptoms is observed, the symptoms do not stop, the patient's personality degrades, interests are narrowed. On the contrary, I observed only an expansion of interests, this time I lived a more or less full life. Hobbies both were, and remained. For some time after the completion of the work of the "internal TV", which showed "shots from another planet", in the right eye, that is, in the visual center, in the part that corresponds to the right eye, the feeling of an "inserted tube" remained rather unpleasant, then it passed.

During this period, he was actively thinking about what it was all about. The very first thing that came to mind was that it was all a built-in soldier. Since he just lied to me and did me bad. A rather reasonable-looking idea that you can simply embed a soldier in a subordinate form, and he will not let the slaves attack the masters. But the nature of the observation of all manifestations is not consistent with this possibility. A soldier would put forward conditions, and a concrete image of the owner, which could not be attacked, would be laid. I have not recorded anything like this. On the contrary, this individual in the head seems to act the opposite of what is necessary in this case, fighting those who could just become a friend and ally of the owners themselves, and pushing them back, but pushing forward dumb and aggressive personalities. It turns out "the policeman is the other way around". So you can only achieve that hordes of stupid freaks will kill these masters, and that's all. I also understood from the analysis of archaeological finds that no evidence of the presence of developed civilizations here, especially alien ones, was found on Earth. Who was to be guarded by this soldier? The hypothesis was not confirmed, then I therefore abandoned the idea of the military nature of this rudiment. But then what is it? I went through many different other hypotheses, in particular, the crossing of different species of our distant ancestors of hominids, some of which may have been made artificially by aliens. And this led to the appearance of a hybrid in which the remains of the built-in guard of the owners, which is not suitable for humans, have been preserved. Or the fact that something ready was inserted into a person, for example, so that the Cro-Magnon did not die out. And in this rudiment, by mistake, a military branch of thinking remained, which can sometimes be activated accidentally. But this does not explain everything that happened to me, the complex nature of the story presented to me. Why put it in? For what?

As a result, I began to believe that the "alien history" is something like a service program that works in the event of a serious failure among this multicomponent rudiment. A person thinks they are being told about another world, and this is a kind of debugging mode. And all this as a result of civilian purposes, was intended to give civilization to man, but it regularly does not work correctly for some reason. And all that was with me was a tragic mistake. I began to understand the theory of evolution, and I saw many obvious gaps. From the point of view of ordinary logic, there were no ways to explain some points. It confused me, I began to think that evolution was driven by the built-in biological mechanism, which was hooked at the beginning of evolution. A new transformation, for example, idio-adaptation, was prepared in advance by this robot, and he forced the creature to realize them. For example, he made the bird learn to fly or move the eyes of the flounder on one side. It turned out a kind of "intelligent design" inside. But the doctor of biological sciences, with whom I corresponded at one time, dissuaded me, explaining that my point of view is called "spontaneous Lamarckism", and it was proved that this mechanism is not in DNA. In the end, I came to the conclusion that all this, with which I came across, is just a sexual instinct. It is simply very complicated, especially for a man, because a woman has evolved so that most often she does not want to have children, therefore she does not want sex. And to achieve reciprocity from her has become an increasingly difficult task for a man. Therefore, the sexual instinct became more and more complex. So he leads the unfortunate man to the woman, forcing her to seek in any way. And the story told is just a fantasy in a relatively reasonable area of sexual instinct, created from nothing to do. And in general, all this could happen to me because I have a chronic lack of cerebral circulation, or a latent form of mental illness.

In 2017, I suddenly began a severe exacerbation of irritable bowel syndrome. Of course, I myself was guilty in many respects, but noted that before this strange way I wanted exactly what I was not allowed to. For example, drink a solution from a jar of pickled cucumbers. And I really wanted to a state of drug addiction. Naturally, the exacerbation began, but I did not expect that it would be so strong. There were such severe pains that I did not sleep at night. And nothing helped, neither the usual pills that I had previously taken, nor the strictest diet. It is very typical for many of my chronic diseases that the exacerbation started unexpectedly, at the time of feeling full health, it was very strong, and then the disease became stubborn, did not want to go away. My trip to the doctors ended in testing for eight months. I passed a lot of tests for everything, and went through several expensive examinations. But the doctors did not find anything serious. Again! And I realized that once again the doctors were ready to carry out diagnostics ad infinitum, but they did not know how to treat at all. It turned out that every time I knew more about this disease than a doctor, and even more than a PhD! As a result, I was tired of it, and I took up the treatment myself. As always. I myself developed a treatment methodology, and in 2019, improvements finally began. There was an opportunity to live more or less normally. But in the end, I realized that for eight years I had been ill for five years with chronic diseases of an incomprehensible nature. A difficult and gloomy period, it is not clear then why it is so established.

In 2020, I decided to write a book. I have long wanted, one might say, this is a dream of my childhood and youth. It should have turned out an adventure tale, with humor, unexpected plot twists, kind, with a good happy ending. At the same time, it is quite voluminous in concept. And at first everything went very well. For the first time, I applied new techniques when writing, borrowed from programming. Suddenly, I realized that I could write the final part, I came up with it entirely. I started to do it, and there, in particular, I had planned the happy love of the protagonist and the wedding. Therefore, I painted the images of several women in the biography of the protagonist. Artistically. With some acceptable amount of intimate scenes. Without attaching much importance to this, I thought it was a secondary plot move, just created for a happy ending. Suddenly, I noticed that my "fellow traveler", who until now had not shown himself at all, began to express dissatisfaction. All the time he tried to focus my attention on this part of the plot, although by that time I was thinking about the rest, and made outlines there. Moreover, in the mornings all the heroines invented by me came to visit him, and he personally kissed them all. But this saddened me a little, in the end, it helped the imagery of implementation. Then something happened, as if a stream of sexuality poured into consciousness, accompanied, oddly enough, by a weakening of the erection. I thought that age, after all, did not attach any importance to this. I decided to turn it into creativity. Then something strange began. My "fellow traveler" made a tantrum that in my youth there was nothing like this, and at that time everything had to be done to get women. To which I reasonably objected to him that he should have come with this then, and now it's too late. Then, in my 20s, he was silent like a fish. It was painful, lonely, bitter, hopeless. But no one ever forced me to explicitly run after the girls. Like this: go and get what is right. As a result, I had a debriefing of my youth period, I admitted that I had made a number of irreparable mistakes, but then I just did not realize the complexity of the situation, and that I needed to act quickly. And there was no one to tell me.

As a result, the onset of depression receded, and I decided to continue working on the book, in the part where the girls are not mentioned at all.

Then the strange phenomena began. At first I started to wake up very early, did not get enough sleep. There was no way to force myself to sleep. This, of course, prevented me from writing a book, and for a while I stopped work, limiting myself to the outline of what I came up with for the future. I bought a sedative and gradually leveled off my sleep, realizing that this situation is harmful to my health. But someone was trying hard to return me to the thought of women. As a result, out of principle, I stopped thinking about them. I didn't think, that's all! About anything, but not about women. This led to unexpected consequences. There was activity when the "fellow traveler" began to behave strangely, as if they, the "spirits" had hidden plans for me there, but he refused to talk about them. I began to suspect that they were again trying to make me fall in love with a woman, and again unhappily falling in love, which would be completely stupid in this situation. For the first time in 2003, this was unexpected, and I still believed in the possibility of a fluke. But in my 50+ it's funny to think so. Moreover, ladies of my age did not cause any thoughts about love for a long time, the age when it was still possible was long over. Realizing that this number will not work with me, the fellow traveler began to behave completely incomprehensibly. He seemed to be about to sneeze for a long time, then finally got ready ... and went nuts! An indescribable feeling when someone is crazy next to your mind! Sometimes there was such a powerful madness that I realized that somewhere, somewhere in the depths of the right hemisphere, there was a complete cessation of consciousness. And so almost every day. But I myself was relatively normal! Consciousness was fully functional, only occasionally there was a whistle on the right in the head, and again the "furious hat". But this time, no hallucinations, neither auditory nor visual pseudo-hallucinations. Only unpleasant sensations under the skin, as if someone was crawling there.

I didn't understand anything at first, I thought that this was an infuriated sexual instinct. But pretty quickly it became clear that with a woman and with sexual arousal, this is practically not connected. Then, in the middle of the night, regular monotonous sounds began, as if someone was arranging East Slavic dances. An imitation of singing in a monotonous male voice, reminiscent of a mournful aria. Or even a melody reminiscent of folk. Or gospel. Sometimes a howl resembling the sound of a diving bomber from the Second World War. Luftwaffe, not otherwise! I used to believe that this was due to diseased cerebral vessels. It turned out, no. Very much disturbed to sleep. Then I had a vivid dream, where someone invisible said that he would help me and turned off the sound of the speaker. From that moment, the night dances temporarily stopped, and the melodies became much quieter. As I understand it, the service program has worked.

But during the day the attacks of the fellow "traveler's" insanity continued, capturing more and more sensible brain areas that were not involved in the main activity of my consciousness. It interfered of course, rather, like pressure on the head, on the right ear, and very weak covering headaches. Most likely, these were spasms in the right hemisphere caused by insanity there. But at the same time, the full realization that a mental patient is beating in a fit with me in a seizure, and in a state of rage, even saliva flows from my mouth. But his thoughts, emotions, which he experiences, I have never realized. Most of all, this condition was reminiscent of explosions on an enemy submarine, when it is felt that something is happening somewhere in the depths, and sometimes shock waves even reach, but almost nothing is evident on the surface.

It became clear that all this happens when I sit down to work or think about something for the future, make plans. Someone seems to hate that I am inventing something, composing something, I have my own plans, and he interferes with this in every way, being in the same head. I finally stopped getting sick, and began to do something, and with pleasure, how dare I! Oh, I am! Dared to be healthy and happy. Finally came an understanding of what it is. An ordinary, completely ordinary combat robot, built into the right hemisphere of the brain. There is nothing particularly mysterious about him. He's just partially intelligent. A completely understandable genetic enemy of man, the opposite of him in everything. It interferes in all ways, and, in fact, does nothing else. Moreover, it is very noticeable how, having tried all the methods to stop me, he simply began to fight with everything that is still available to him. He tries one method, does not work, another does not work, the third does not impress me either, then he waits for a while, as if he is thinking about what to do next. And again in a circle. But each time is a little different, and this is the least like hallucinations. Now that all this husk of misinformation and beautiful lies he has ended, he did not find anything smarter than to stupidly attack me and fight in silence! This is not surprising, as every gopnik did every time when he ran out of arguments. Before starting to fight stupidly, he twice asked me to surrender, to bow to it is not clear to whom. But there's no one right in front of me! Perhaps it is somewhere rigidly embedded in him, a mode of obedience to the ruler, but here he is not, this ruler! By this he reminded me of some birds, for example, an owl, which at the moment when it was noticed, begins to bow. Tired of fighting and from his constant madness, he rests. See, you see. Then he again enters the ring and fights. It became clear that he was absolutely stupid. And so stupid that he does not understand that he is fighting with himself and damaging his health. This behavior is typical of a combat mechanism. Only the dumbest creatures will fight their bodies!

It also became clear that he had been fighting with me all his life. And over the years, he simply struggled with my body, making it weaker, causing various diseases that were very difficult to cure. Therefore, all my life I was weak, short-sighted, frail, overly cautious, I never had the strength to start doing something, it was difficult to run and generally play sports. He suffered from various chronic illnesses, amorosness, excessive sexuality. And I did not understand this. But it turns out that I was beaten from the inside by a stupid combat mechanism. Unhappy love in 2003 is just his military strike, nothing more. He also drove all kinds of idiots to me, in endless crowds, so that they would stupidly interfere with me. Including my parents, whom I made soldiers of this undeclared war. He bombarded me all the time with a huge amount of unnecessary work, which was invented by the next smug donkey. It prevented me from advancing in my career, interfered in my personal life, rightly say - it interfered with everything. Therefore, as I understand it, neither women, nor bosses, friends, never appreciated me, they seemed to bypass me, not giving me the right to even compete with someone on equal terms. That is why I have had "stripes" all my life, he struck, I was treated or recovering, then he struck a new blow. That's the whole mystery of millennia. People believe that immortality, eternal life, universal love awaits them, and this turns out to be an extremely stupid genetic enemy that hates everyone who is at least a little smart. Typically for this situation - "friends" at the beginning of the journey, in the end it turns out that this is a stupid fighting machine and enemy soldiers, a war. What nonsense, right? Well, there's nothing special about this?

All my life I struggled with an infinite desire to have sex. I remember that in my youth I was bored, as soon as I wanted to sit down to write a book, I immediately had an urgent desire for sex. All the time I sincerely envied those who are not very burdened by this constant lust. It turned out to be a genetic enemy! Absolutely dumb. And now it happened, as soon as I started to write a book, he was trying to shove thoughts of sex into me, and on a grand scale, because I know about it and don't react. I can't write stories! And I can't invent something either! I have to go and have sex. Moreover, with whom, this is my problem. I have to replace my dreams of a profession with dreams of sex. And implement them yourself. Now I understand why the spirit told me in 2003 "this is a gift" about my unhappy love. Because it was supposed to be a gift, in return for everything that I dreamed about in life, I would be given sex. The problem is that he killed the sex himself. Women did not need sex. But the genetic is so dumb that it does not understand. He does not seem to understand anything at all. He doesn't understand that a woman is needed for sex. That there is age and other problems. A dumb fighting vehicle that has been bothering me all my life. The one who made it was not even puzzled by the simple thing: to make it consistent with himself. If you are replacing a person's thoughts with thoughts about sex, at least make sex real! But no. This stupid enemy makes it so that a man has everything in his body and character to make it uninteresting for women, but there is an obsessive desire, an overvalued idea to get sex, and the enemy only knocks on it unsuccessfully. As a result, a person does not get anything, but what was supposed to be a gift turns into a tragedy.

Realizing somehow that thoughts of women would not interest me, he tried to stop me from thinking, as if he wanted to stop all my thoughts altogether. So that I don't think about anything at all. Unpleasant sensations, of course. But it lasts for a maximum of half an hour. Then he once, and falls off. Silently. And in my thoughts it becomes clear, but slight pains are felt in different places on the right side of the head. Least of all is it reminiscent of a typical mental disorder.

It finally became clear why this was built in. The alien masters of our planet themselves did not live here. They did not want civilization on Earth to develop and become cosmic. They were just having fun here. Maybe they had a base on the moon, there were some mysterious traces of buildings. Recent flashes on the moon and visits to "flying saucers" were often recorded in the middle of the 20th century, now there are very few of them. Most likely, the civilization of the owners died of their vileness, leaving us a dumb military mechanism built by them from fear, which impedes any attempt to build a civilization and live happily. This mechanism is actually just a stupid small animal, but genetically modified to complete insanity, in order to fight everything that humanity likes and that it considers good for itself. For people like me, everything is simple. I should never have achieved what I most wanted. No matter what. But because. This is the highest pleasure for a primitive mentally ill sadist. You have no right to anything, so he decided.

Moreover, it is a mistake to believe that "spirits" is something small. This genetic enemy is huge! Most likely, it occupies the entire right hemisphere of the brain. Presumably consists of a number of modules sequentially planted on a single nerve channel. This is their "axis". Most likely, the mechanism controls through this channel, making the modules hurt, threatening their consciousness or, conversely, creating pleasant sensations. When he fights them with a person, the modules go crazy. The stupid mechanism most likely begins to work most actively from the age of 30-35, after the "midlife crisis" in men and the "Balzac age" in women, causing gradual degradation of thinking, and hidden mental disorders of certain types. For example, people start to think that bad is good, dangerous is harmless, etc. Nobody suits him, he fights with everyone, just uses the degree of their degradation in different ways. Therefore, civilization of earthlings does not add up all the time.

There is no complete certainty, but it is likely that the most actively described mechanism works for those who have been fond of space research and flights since childhood. It was so with me. It is possible that a special "space" trap module is built in to isolate such "enemies". As a child, I felt an almost religious feeling, thinking about the depths of space, and how starships fly there. It was akin to ecstasy. Then, at my student age, it disappeared, giving way to increased sexuality. If a person is actively interested in a trap that forms his dreams of long-distance space flights, then it turns on the genetic enemy for the most active mode of operation. For example, the founder of astronautics Konstantin Eduardovich Tsiolkovsky also had this. At a later age, he suffered from schizophrenia, often gave out strange ideas, and claimed to be in contact with "etheric entities".

There is a reasonable suspicion that a reasonable part of the mechanism lives in its own, fictional world, in virtual reality created by the program. Therefore, he receives his pleasures from life, not the same as man. He cannot be an ally or friend; for him, his personal world is more important. In fact, this is a "parallel" civilization, unknown to us, existing by itself, in its own world, and for us, in fact, building only obstacles in development.

I guess why the "fellow traveler" eventually went crazy. Human consciousness is tertiary, and is built by the coincidence of three. If the "third" does not coincide with the other two at all, the service module is turned on, which is trying to correct the situation. If the fix fails, then the "third" just comes to a complete standstill and eventually goes crazy. Since I know about his existence in my head, as a separate person, he can no longer deceive me with impunity. But he needs to complete the task, to harm me in every way. In this, he completely fell out of the surrounding reality. Therefore, silently went crazy and he has nothing to say. When he tries to think something of his own, he noticeably interferes with his state of insanity, but quickly gets tired.

As a result, it became clear that the enemy was pushing me this time. I had to realize that I was already over 50 years old, I was too old for young girls, and cry about this. And that's all. Dumb hate from a sadistic genetic enemy. But as it turned out, the control mechanism overworked in due time, because it fought with its own body, and died in 2012 from a lack of cerebral circulation. Therefore, for eight years he did nothing. And he came to life again, but for a long time he was not enough. He again fought, received a return from the body, very much chickened, so he trembled for hours. I felt this trembling, as if riding a village tractor. It feels like he is a brain fragment of a genetically modified monkey, some kind of macaque, but in fact it is the mind of an insect. Horsefly, nothing more. When it falls off, it makes sounds in the head such as rustling or chirping. The rest of his partially reasonable details this time behaved like real clowns, so I laughed heartily. Then they, too, were chickened when their chief surrendered. It felt like some rat tried to escape from his head, but nowhere. The other rat, from behind, twitched, desperately trying to take such a position so as not to go crazy again, but in vain. So this mechanism is quite possible to defeat, no need to be cowardly, that's all. It is designed for the fact that a person does not know him, and he quietly harms. In the event of a direct collision, it is much weaker.

Most likely, the enemy at one time realized that in my youth I had big problems with girls, nothing worked, I was very worried about this. And he clung to this idea, with which he banged on me all his life. Now, now you need to achieve a beautiful girl, when you are already over 50 years old. And cry because of this. At the same time, he mentally showed me the dial, in which the hand goes back. All this would be correct if it were not a fundamentally impossible task. It is characteristic that he never bothered me so that I would succeed in work, career, realize some of my youthful dreams, for example, write a book. Only with what I can't do at all. And when it started to work out, he was stopping me from doing this. So, I understand, overvalued ideas for life are being formed. A man spends a lot of time and effort to achieve some unnecessary nonsense, for example, beautiful female legs in black tights. I remember in the army often liked to repeat: "it doesn't matter what the soldier is busy with, just to be tired". As I understand it, this is the whole point of such "conducting". They always lead to a dead end, except when it is convenient for an invisible war.

There was a suspicion why such a strange ending to this event occurred. All this together resembled repentance before some higher being. First I had to bow to him, then I should have tears of tenderness in front of him. As a result, an imitation of all this came, apparently, the worship of a higher being is tightly sewn into a "fellow traveler", as well as an act of repentance. The problem is that I did not see a higher being in front of myself at this moment. And I especially have nothing to repent of. Moreover, this coincided with the manifestation that in order to receive the gift promised in 2003, I had to somehow return the time back in an unknown way. Otherwise, the enemy does not know how. Therefore, it turned out that I should cry, because already by virtue of my age I can't get love from a beautiful girl. As a result, a complete impasse of the idiotic mechanism, completely divorced from reality. Perhaps that is why he fought with me because he was fatally mistaken and then did not coincide with anything.

Very interesting are some dreams that are repeated once in a while. For example, the fact that I was again drafted into the army, despite the fact that I served. Or even more characteristic: that someone is attacking. This someone is himself invisible, but people on the street see signs in the sky, for example, a luminous dial against the background of the moon, and understand that you need to hide. When you hide, it starts to grab you and lift you up to the ceiling. Dreams are bright, colorful. I guess that someone so warns the "spirits" that they will be used, but these warnings are irregular and are unlikely to help.

I also understood what happened to me after 2003. The genetic enemy performed the task, it was catastrophically mistaken, then the service program turned on with a lie, it did not work, and he was fixated on the task. He begins to carry it out, discovers that the person is not involved in this, and in every possible way tries to attract his attention. Realizing that nothing helps, he starts again. And so on to infinity, until he dies. At the same time, he is now fulfilling an empty space, because his reasonable part in 2012 I died. And he won't come up with anything for me. Typical symptoms of a mental disorder may occur, it will seem that someone is to blame, an execution is being prepared. In fact, none of this happens. This is familiar to psychiatrists, but in this case, the person himself is not involved in this, and perceives what is happening as secondary problems somewhere in the inaccessible part of the head, parallel to his consciousness. In fact, this enemy simply prevents me from working in various ways, which he did from the very beginning. This is what typically happens to those who have experienced "revelation from above." The service module could not rectify the situation, and the mechanism works in vain, in a circle, destroying its elements. Until he dies, while creating a threat to human health and life. Then it can come to life again, because the body restores it, and begins to interfere again, working in an endless circle of the same. It seems that there is something beautiful and interesting in it, in fact it is all extremely disgusting. The limit of immorality of the creator of the genetic enemy is to create desires and at the same time interfere with their fulfillment. Get the joy of meanness and die with it. This bottom cannot be pierced.

As a fitting ending to the story, the mechanism ended up turning first into an enemy that wildly hated being discovered, yelled in my head and fought. Then into the dirty lunatic that he had been from the very beginning.

Further relations with him grew into a direct fight. The astral double threatened, was rude, tried to hurt, interfered with eating, reading, writing, talking, even swallowing. He also exacerbated the symptoms of chronic diseases during the period of activity, which grew with him. Then he completely went insane. It turned out that his mind was controlled by a stupid little monkey, who was just crazy because he couldn't harm me in any way. This went on for almost three years, at the end I used a quick mental rotation of objects on the right side of the head. For example, bicycle pedals. This method turned out to be effective and made it possible to achieve a turning point in the situation.

As I think, initially it was a robot of the evolution of the species, which made you try, learn and be cultured. Rudiments of this remained. Then he was remade into a combat bio-robot of the built-in occupation, which ruthlessly destroys potentially dangerous peoples from the inside, so that it seems imperceptible to them. As a result of such a step of evolution, such peoples are often destroyed along with the population. It is very difficult to fight this biorobot, it is absolutely brainless and repeats the same attempts 100500 times to get a person to make a critical mistake. So he destroyed almost all the achievements of our past and all normal relations, replacing them with criminal concepts. At the same time, the destroyed are sincerely sure that everything in their life happens for natural reasons, the mechanism makes them think so. It is difficult to find a more motivated and ideological enemy! This is a military bastard, originally intended to fight civilians. He does not understand any conscience, morality and morality, while he only lies. It is impossible to force it to stop working, it can only be completely destroyed.

It became clear that the mechanism most closely resembles a guard dog in its behavior. Very stupid and vicious. That is why it is sometimes impossible to get out of a simple traumatic situation. It fights so stupidly. The mechanism is composite, in the center of the hemisphere there is a stupid monkey, it hates everyone, because it is a genetic enemy of all living things. Behind is the executive element, essentially a stupid lapdog, it is made to perform these actions with extreme hatred for people. The lapdog often goes crazy because it cannot achieve its goal, and begins to fight stupidly. It hurts inside. This is how schizophrenia begins.

In all this, what surprised me most were the sharp changes, when things suddenly became bad against the background of external well-being. For example, the birth collapse of 1987, which I mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, came unexpectedly after the birth peak. I did not understand how this could happen? There is an assumption that this is the work of a built-in genetic military liquidator. The mechanism switches to it when it cannot normally complete the implementation of its military task. This means that everyone must be finished off. These are the consequences of that war on another planet, fragments of which we managed to spy on. It ended with the complete destruction of the population and the disabling of all devices that transmitted biological codes of species evolution here. That is why we have such a strange end to the built-in invisible war here. In history, humanity has stumbled upon this many times, and suffered a catastrophe, without understanding what it was. And in general, very similar events have occurred.

So in 1987, a liquidator worked in the USSR, which led to the death of the state from internal causes. It simply fell apart and the authorities fled. But most enterprises were still operating, and the main government structures too. In 1991, the government changed. At the same time, there was a clear desire for change. But women categorically did not want relationships with men. That very severe birth rate collapse occurred. In 2022, a largely similar situation developed, when by all indications women again refused men, and in sex too. And everywhere, in all more or less developed countries. This is clear from the change in the content of films and videos, eroticism, the theme of love and relationships with women disappeared.

I have a reasonable assumption that in both cases this is the work of the built-in liquidator of the human species. It leads to impassable dead ends in relationships and ends with the disappearance of the entire nation that fell under it. The liquidator worked for the first time in the 1980s, after the collapse of the 1970s, which this mechanism created. But the collapse was not so obvious then. The mechanism became a thief in relation to the generations of the 1960s and is guilty, they reached the age of inability to start relationships with young women, about whom this same mechanism made them dream, without achieving anything. When it is impossible to imagine in your head the dreams of relationships between men and women and women with men that are necessary for the mechanism to work, it switches to the liquidator branch, which completely finishes them off. For everyone who participated in this. Also now, after the failures in relationships of the 2000s, men in developed countries of the world simply cannot imagine how to communicate normally and start love relationships with women. In this case, the liquidator works. It causes the majority of the population to go crazy, and normal relationships between people become impossible.

In the 1990s, after the collapse of the USSR, there was a decline in the economy and birth rate. An influx of migrants from peripheral regions to megacities began. This improved the situation for a short time. But then the collapse began again, caused by the work of this mechanism. Normal relations with women did not develop among the intelligentsia and the working class, and those who came from the periphery were mostly dishonest people who were engaged in trade, not production. As a result, the collapse occurred again and the liquidator worked. But this time in Russia in the 2020s there is not even a hint of progressive sentiments and a desire to rebuild this country. Everyone is already tired of it. This is how the collapse into the backward countries of the third world begins.

In the United States, during this period, slightly different events took place, but generally similar. The US economy was fueled by immigrants from other countries for a long time. At first, there was progress, when active people arrived. But then, after the 1980s, people began to go there for an easy life, not to work. Not the same people as before. The white population did not have relationships with white women and did not have children from them. Many beautiful white women in the United States, Canada, Europe, Russia became prostitutes and kept women. As a result, men in the United States married black, Filipino, Mexican women. But their children, due to genetics, no longer had the same level of intelligence and desire to work as previous generations. This led to an economic decline and a decline in the intellectual level of the majority of the US population, which many noted. Already now, in the 2020s, the US economy resembles the economy of Brazil, almost all goods are imported, and there are few domestic manufacturing companies left. The result is obvious. They should go in the same direction.

There is an assumption how this happened. This military gear was completely imported from another planet. Therefore, it contains a section of consciousness that is not used here at all. And there it was built-in military control, which is so cruel that our German fascism during Hitler's time seems like a real sanatorium. You cannot think forbidden things, only what you are allowed! Around the control devices that are built into buildings, on poles, around the planet in the form of a swarm of satellites, and they are visible to the naked eye. This rudiment is sometimes activated in the mentally ill, and doctors do not know what it is. It is believed to be fantastic delirium containing cosmic hallucinations. And of a frightening character. And this is an alien military system of relations. This rudiment betrays its alien origins when examined more closely.

It is, of course, impossible to see the world of our creators directly in your subconscious. Reasonable consciousness transforms this into pictures of our world that surrounds us. But in fantasies, dreams and daydreams, we see it in a strange way distorted. This is often reflected in computer games, films, fiction, painting, architecture, and industrial product design. Most likely, when our species Homo Sapiens was created, geneticists recorded it in the form of associations. They knew how to do it. These associations often come up in life, for example, at the moment of déjà vu, when a person experiences a vivid impression of a clear recognition of something that has never happened to him. At the same time, they recorded associations with their world, which they themselves considered correct, and there were only mistakes in it. Most likely, they then fought the extinction of their species, using the method that they themselves considered correct. But in the end, they realized that this only aggravated the situation, and ran into their own mistakes. Then they most likely realized that this was something very bad. They did an artificial extinction of the species instead of correcting it, as they themselves thought. Most likely, at that time they themselves were dying out, and did not fully understand the reasons for what was happening to them.

For a long time I didn't understand how the aliens got to this point. How can you not understand simple things! But everything is quite simple. This is the result of disgusting relationships and genetic wars between several peoples, when they quietly harmed each other for centuries and tried to win something for nothing for themselves. As a result, in a narrowing spiral, they all reached a complete genetic dead end of their own species, similar to ours, and died.

The only mystery that remains is what happened before this moment during the millions of years of life on Earth. And where did these aliens lay their developments? What was the final product? And how did it end up here?

We often have legends that life is much better in the higher worlds, close to the creators of the universe. But this story clearly shows otherwise. Worse than on the planet of our creators, nowhere can be. Even in a Nazi concentration camp during World War II, it was probably easier.

An excellent topic for scientific research that will shed light on many mysteries in the history of our planet. But reactionary modern science no longer accepts any other explanation, except that everything here happened by itself. And she will not do this.

From that moment I look around and, to be honest, I find it funny. Happy love? Happy family life? Successful career? Development of science and technology? Conquest of space? Guys, don't tell me! With this fighting mechanism in your head, this is simply impossible! It prevents everyone from living. It spoils absolutely everything! Not because he likes it, but simply because he is so arranged, to harm everything. An ordinary stupid bastard, built tightly into literally everyone.

You need to remove all this shit from your head, and immediately everything will be fine. It will be as it should be.

Of course, the most important question remains: how did all this get here from another planet? We were left with an explanation, but it is very confused and incomprehensible. As I guess, they started explaining something to us, and at that moment everything was banned. We managed to understand that at first there was a very ancient transport mechanism from planet to planet. It was built by a very highly developed civilization, possibly the third type on the Kardashev scale. Probably, this happened billions of years ago. Then our galaxy looked different. But then the stars diverged and the connections were broken. What was built to replace it was based on principles incomprehensible to humans. This something was doing the evolution of species on Earth, transmitting decisions from another planet. What it looked like, we can no longer say now.

But we know what the last human-type civilization on another planet looked like. Approximately like ours now. Houses, shops, railways, subways, cars. Houses are not as tall as ours. The built-in combat mechanism did not allow them to develop higher. They eventually reached a dead end and died. This was the biological dead end of the human species.

At the same time, those who tried to do something useful for us, themselves lived in extreme poverty and injustice. Then the total war began and they died. Now humanity is going through this moment on our planet.

How to check it

You probably thought I was just another fantasist and a liar, and this was all a fabrication. Or just a mentally ill person who was confidentially sharing his hallucinations. In fact, all of this can be verified if you have the desire and, most importantly, you're not a coward!

I want to warn you right away that studying this vestige could be dangerous to your health. The military biorobot is very vicious and stubborn, and in this case, it will interfere for years and decades. It can also be very frightening. Essentially, it is nothing more than a mentally unstable attack dog, trapped in your subconscious within its own military rules. If the biorobot is discovered and forbidden to follow its military rules, it becomes brutal and begins to attack you, increasingly intensely with each passing year.

STUDYING THE FUNCTIONALITY OF YOUR OWN SUBCONSCIOUSNESS TURNS OUT TO BE DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH AND LIFE

If a biorobot switches to liquidator mode, it begins to interfere until the person surrenders. In this case, it's a combat bastard, endlessly deceitful and brazen, who attacks without stopping to admit he's wrong or has nothing to say. Fighting it is difficult; the biorobot is nothing more than a stupid dog, sicced on a person by a combat genetic program. In this case, the only way to get rid of it is to kill the combat biorobot in your head. Even if you chicken out, you won't escape that way. You'll know that the enemy is guiding you from your subconscious and will begin to filter out the erroneous decisions the biorobot is pushing at you. In this case, a confrontation with it is inevitable.

Even if the person surrenders in this case, the biorobot will continually attempt to harm them and work to destroy their consciousness to the point of severe mental illness. This can happen even if you know nothing about the biorobot's existence, but in this case, it will be more obvious and intense.

I found myself in this situation because I was curious to understand it. At first, the biorobot was giving me information I couldn't find anywhere else! Later, I realized the internet didn't have the information I was receiving from my subconscious, and then it turned out it was another planet! It was as if I'd been there, and I still remember those who participated. It was as if they were invisibly nearby, although, as I understood it, they had long since perished in the last terrible war that destroyed the entire population there. And where this planet, the ancestral home of humanity, is, and how far from Earth, is unknown. Is it still inhabited, or was all life on it destroyed at the dawn of our species? Is it a planet of the star Tau Ceti? Epsilon Eridani? I don't know the answer.

Also, during their studies of nuclear fission, scientists observed the glow of radioactive materials, unaware that it was mortally dangerous. And they became ill from exposure to radiation. But they were curious!

IF YOU'RE NOT WILLING TO TAKE THE RISK, IT'S BETTER NOT TO CONTINUE

But you didn't chicken out and decided to start.

The simplest way, it seems, is to begin communicating with a biorobot through spiritualism and automatic writing. In reality, this being is perfectly aware that you know about them, and using this method, they simply won't tell you anything valuable! Or they'll simply start proving it's all nonsense with their stupidity, like, "Let's have a laugh together." This approach is only suitable if you know nothing about them, being naive. You can ask someone you know to conduct such a séance, as long as you don't tell them anything in advance, but you won't learn much this way.

The second method requires constant self-control. You're aware that there are functional modules in your head controlled by a hostile robot that interfere with your thinking or feed you false, even harmful, ideas. All of this should be felt in the right, back of your head, where the nerve node is located. If you suddenly want something, and really want it, for example, to buy an expensive item, to pursue a beautiful woman, or you suddenly feel jealous, stop and don't do it on principle. It's out of a sense of contradiction. I won't, and that's it! I don't want that car, I don't want to fall in love with that woman. You don't need constant thoughts about sex. After a while, the biorobot will start to manifest itself. It wasn't designed for that kind of behavior.

The third method is quite simple. If you're suddenly plagued by thoughts that you personally consider harmful advice, obsessive ideas about doing something that you can't shake off. For example, spending a lot of money, getting into debt, suddenly needing something that you just didn't seem interested in, or feeling envious of someone, you can simply start mentally spinning some images in the right back corner of your head. This is where the hostile modules connect to your consciousness. For example, spinning a long stick you've drawn. You can mentally reach towards yourself to the right and back, as if you were mentally trying to grab someone. And most importantly, you clearly realize that this isn't your idea at all; it's been imposed on you by someone else! The actuator mechanism at this point continues to push the idea, but it's quite stupid, but the intelligent part of the biorobot may be frightened by such actions, and you'll clearly sense it as something alien in your consciousness.

Experience has shown that it's possible to probe sensitive points in the biorobot's consciousness and cause it significant pain. The biorobot particularly dislikes having an object slowly rotated behind it on the right. For example, imagine a second hand moving across a clock face, counting down the seconds one by one. You can easily identify which movement it particularly dislikes by feeling noticeable resistance. For example, using clockwise or counterclockwise rotation. The main sign is a noticeable resistance to your mental efforts.

If you feel resistance or an inability to perform a movement freely, you've hit a sensitive spot. If you seize the moment, during the period of greatest mental stress that triggers obsessive desires, you can significantly hinder the biorobot's operation. And it will clearly give itself away.

The fourth reliable method involves completely eliminating thoughts about women and sex, if you're a man. You're a young or not-so-young heterosexual man, and of course, who cares about this anymore? As soon as such thoughts appear, push them away. Like a weightlifter. No, that's it! You don't want to think about women and sex, and there's no way to make you do so. And so on, day after day. Look at the world around you realistically.

WOMEN NEVER BEHAVE THE WAY MEN MISTAKENLY THINK THEY DO

This is the fundamental and fatal problem of our species. It was created this way from the beginning. In the real world, the overwhelming majority of women respond only to a man's status and wealth, and his personal qualities, intellect, talents, and achievements in anything but personal well-being are of no interest to them. At the same time, it is ingrained in a woman's subconscious that if a man needs her and he pursues her, she will reject him or abandon him. This is the primary operating mode of the biorobot. It lies to the man from the subconscious about the beauty of a relationship with a woman, the abundance of sex, love, and family happiness. In the real world, the overwhelming majority of women are uninterested in sex or hate it, and do not want romantic or family relationships or having children. Such a woman connects with a man based on the coincidence of the rules built into the couple's biorobots, which often surprises other men, who actively pursue this themselves, only to encounter a wall of misunderstanding and indifference from women. How exactly is this man better? Nothing. He was simply a match. He behaves with her according to her established rules, which are often mercenary ideas about personal well-being. As a result, the most active men are weeded out. They find themselves outside the sphere of female attention, and they don't understand it. They also don't understand why their women abandon them, while some other men aren't abandoned. But this was established in the rules of military suppression of the biorobot. The main function is to suppress the development of active peoples in this way. Ultimately, these men are left with very few women—those who themselves show interest in sex and relationships. But they can never be trusted. Even such a woman would abandon him at the slightest provocation, leaving a painful wound in her place.

But look around! Millions of young women, many quite attractive, but it's immediately obvious they're not interested in relationships with men. They just walk past and refuse to look at anyone. Everything was based on an internal lie about relationships with women, which the biorobot imposes on those it wants to stop. It thus stupidly creates obstacles out of nowhere. As a result, men often have no choice at all, and breaking up with the only one they've ever been with causes pain, which the biorobot further amplifies, creating the illusion of tragedy.

ALL RELATIONSHIPS BETWEEN MEN AND WOMEN ARE BASED ON THE LIES AROUND THEM

Remember these simple things. The real, living women around you don't like sex and don't want relationships with men. They're not interested. There are no parties or fun gatherings with them, especially not ones with a sexual slant. Women studiously avoid them. This is all a biorobot lie, spread through cinema, television, the internet, and fiction. And even through medical articles. If you're still wondering how to meet a woman, if no one responds, then it's impossible to meet her. Most women do everything possible to prevent a man from meeting them. You've probably experienced this yourself. Just say something polite, and she immediately runs away. If a meeting does happen, it's during a woman's initial period of interest. It's usually very short-lived. The rest of the time, she doesn't want to meet anyone.

There's a lot of fake pornography online, and it seems like there's a lot of sex, but look closely. The vast majority of it is made up of prostitutes, and older ones at that. They always start with oral sex, and the actual sex their partners have with them is pretentious and unnatural, which betrays the truth. These women aren't interested. This is how they make money. Sometimes the pornography looks horrific, reminiscent of violence against an unfortunate woman who's been caught and is suffering with all her might.

Everything is based on a lack of real relationships and sexual fantasies imposed by the biorobot, which have no direct connection to reality.

In reality, none of this ever happens. It's nothing more than illusions imposed by a biorobot.

Relationships between a man and a woman are always built on a one-on-one basis, excluding any involvement from other characters. A woman avoids any situations that could lead to competition or courtship games.

If you manage to meet a woman, she usually quickly dumps you or makes you conditional on her well-being. After a while, she becomes cold and indifferent, and you can't understand what you did wrong. And yet, you did everything right. But that's not how it works with a woman! You're obliged to boost the economy with your enthusiasm for her, and in the meantime, she suddenly leaves for another man. You don't understand why this is happening, and it's already a war against the human race. That's how it looks. And that's how it is with everyone. That's the rule.

WHEN A WOMAN LEAVES A MAN WHO IS IN LOVE WITH HER, IT'S A GENETIC WAR

Sometimes, most often in men, so-called love develops, reminiscent of a severe paranoid mental disorder. He believes he needs her more than anything else, and that he can't live without her. But this is a mistake. The biorobot always makes choices based on external characteristics, not personal qualities. Therefore, love is almost always unhappy.

UNHAPPY LOVE IS NOTHING MORE THAN A MILITARY STRIKE OF A BIOROBOT

A man suffering from this disorder is incapacitated for a long time.

Don't think this is right. For a species like ours to truly progress, a man must be indifferent and choose a woman, and a woman must try to attract a man. Then the relationship will work and last. But everything works the other way around. Women are overwhelmingly indifferent, and men search among millions of female faces for even a spark of affection. And in vain. Relationships built on this principle, where a man spends too much time not on work but on trying to win a woman's attention, always fall apart. This is how human progress has repeatedly reached a dead end throughout history, and civilization has perished.

PREDICATES OF SEXUAL BEHAVIOR IN MEN AND WOMEN DO NOT COINCIDE IN MOST CASES

It could be said that the reproductive instinct works differently in women and men. It's as if they belong to different biological species that don't interbreed, or interbreed only slightly.

Even if a man marries, he's often unhappy in the marriage. Sex with his wife stops with the birth of a child, or two or three children. After that, the woman lives for herself and creates problems for her husband. Her concern for her husband and children is often greatly exaggerated, but it's not customary to tell the truth about this. Typically, a woman's interests are food, shopping, and real estate, not sex or a clean home. Especially not caring for a man. However, there are many examples of truly inhumane women's treatment of men. These are the rules of a woman's biorobot. Exceptions are very rare.

Sometimes a biorobot switches en masse to liquidator mode, and most women stop responding to men altogether. In this case, the population dies out.

IF YOU THINK THIS WAY, THE BIOROBOT IN YOUR SUBCONSCIOUS WILL INEVITABLY MANIFEST ITSELF

In this case, the biorobot doesn't adhere to its own established rules and begins to impose them on the person, contrary to the reality they perceive around them. If the person still doesn't obey the rules and doesn't believe this lie, the biorobot switches to liquidator mode and begins to interfere with the person in everything, causing mental and physical illness.

If a biorobot manifests itself from your subconscious, first of all, it starts to lie.

YOU CAN'T TRUST ANYTHING THAT THE BIOROBOT TELLS YOU DIRECTLY

True information is embedded in our genetic memory as associations, and rarely emerges directly amidst a flood of lies. It can emerge during the writing of a novel or screenplay in the form of an unusual plot. And the author is unaware that they are telling readers or viewers a true story from the final period of our species' existence on another planet. Often, a highly distorted one.

The biorobot produces a great deal of quasi-religious disinformation, designed to deceive the gullible, but it doesn't align with the officially recognized Christian, Islamic, or Buddhist religions. More often than not, these are nothing more than attempts to explain events from a religious-mystical perspective.

If lying from within doesn't help, a voice or voices appear in the head. This is a malfunction of the biorobot. Often, it tries to convince a person of the truth of its own lies, and fails.

IF YOU HEAR VOICES IN YOUR HEAD, IT IS DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH

You can read about what happened to me in the chapter "How could I find out".

Unfortunately, this biorobot mode tends to develop into a long-term mental disorder with obsessive ruminations about what was seen. Stopping the progression of this disorder is often impossible. A prolonged biorobot malfunction lasting several years, especially the first time the robot switches to liquidator mode, can cause a mini-stroke or even a stroke.

VIEWING INFORMATION FROM THE SUBCONSCIOUS ABOUT REAL EVENTS IS EXTREMELY DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH

If a biorobot is detected and unable to enforce its own rules, it switches to liquidator mode, manifests itself clearly, and becomes extremely disruptive. The procedure for dealing with this is described in the chapter "How to fight this".

How to fight this

So, you've started to investigate, and you've developed psychological problems you don't understand, possibly symptoms of a mental disorder. You've started having trouble sleeping at night, you've developed depression for no apparent reason, and you might even experience voices and hallucinations. There are also physical problems. Frequent urination, which intensifies at night and can be difficult to complete, as if something is interfering with it. Bowel problems, such as flatulence, diarrhea or constipation, and abdominal pain. Headaches and dizziness. You have difficulty concentrating, especially understanding complex texts. Your vision is obscured by dots and possibly bright lines. If you're older, your blood pressure may rise or heart problems may develop. Such symptoms, if they occur suddenly, indicate that you've learned the truth and can no longer accept the lies being spread by the biorobot, which is why the biorobot embedded within you has started fighting.

IT'S SIMPLE TO SAY THAT EVERY PERSON HAS A STUPID SCUM INSTALLED INTO THE CONSCIOUSNESS, WHO INTERFERES WITH EVERYONE AND IN EVERYTHING WITH IMPUNITY

One simple thing to remember is this: If a biorobot can't convince a person to continue believing the lies it's imposing, it begins to fight them, increasingly interfering with their life and work. This fight will only intensify, and there's no simple way out of this state.

IF AN INNER ENEMY IS DISCOVERED, A HUMAN WILL INEVITABLY COME INTO CONFLICT WITH THE BUILT-IN BIOROBOT

A biorobot is essentially an extremely stupid, vicious war animal, embedded in the right hemisphere of the brain. It resembles a common dog, possessing a limited, independent mind, independent of the human's own. If the human no longer believes the lies the biorobot imposes, the biorobot attempts to force the human to surrender and obey; if this fails, the biorobot attempts to kill them. If the human continues to push the biorobot away, refusing to comply with its military rules, the biorobot switches to the liquidator's synapses and begins to fight the human, interfering with them in virtually everything. If the human still refuses to obey, the biorobot goes mad, becomes even more savage, and attacks, resembling the growing symptoms of a severe neuropsychiatric disorder. There is no conventional way out of this state. It's reminiscent of a situation where a mine detonates under a soldier's foot, and if the soldier simply steps off it, the mine will explode.

If a person consciously acknowledges the presence of an embedded enemy, they are faced with a choice, as in a real war: surrender or fight to the end. The biorobot can rest, like a real dog, but then the liquidator activates again, forcing the biorobot to attack, interfering with the person's active life, such as completing work, going somewhere, relaxing, sleeping, or even urinating in the toilet. All of these activities become difficult or impossible to complete. In this mode, the biorobot completely identifies itself and its normal actions. Most often, after this, the person wants to get rid of the biorobot by any means necessary.

A BIOROBOT IN LIQUIDATOR MODE CAN CAUSE PAINFUL CONDITIONS

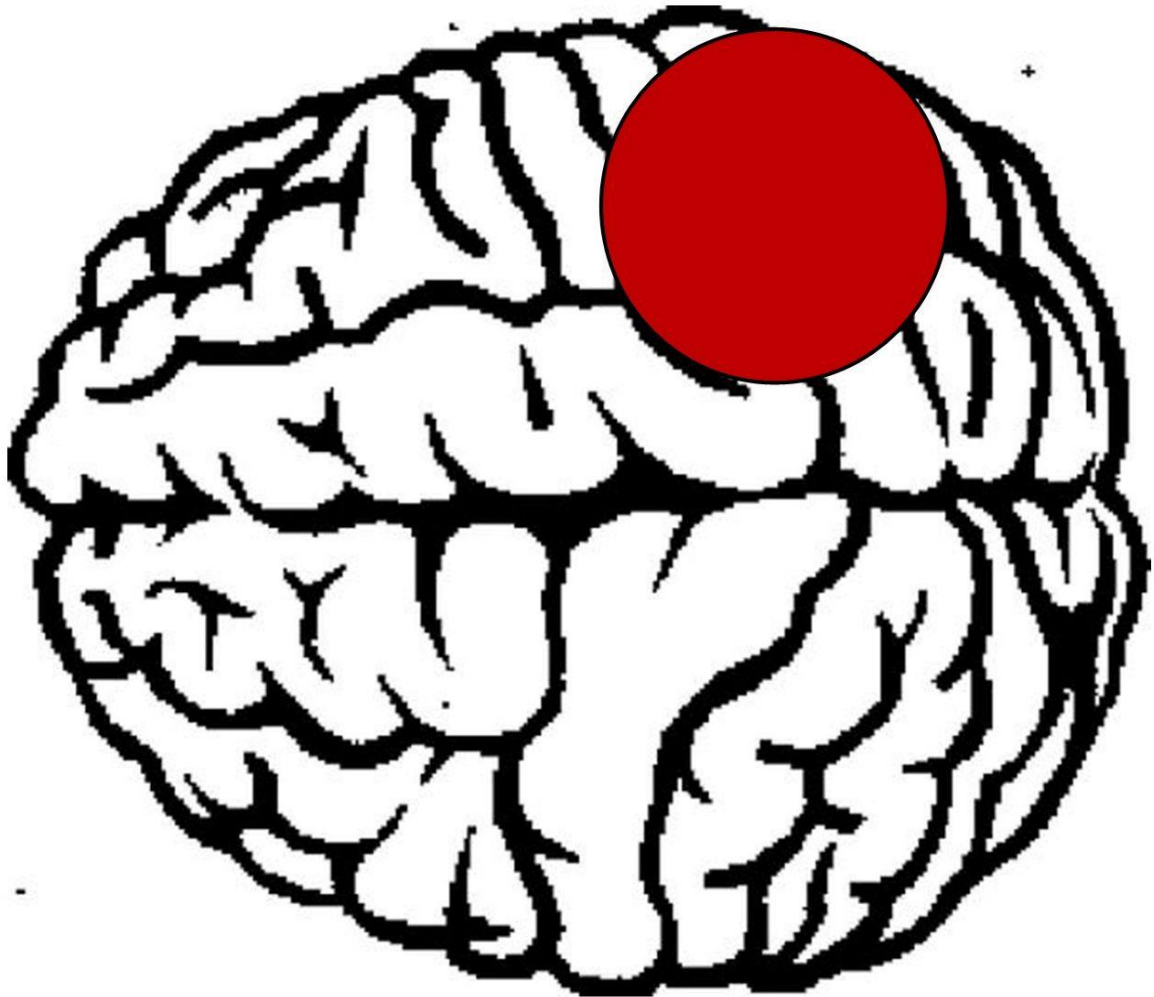

Fighting a built-in biorobot in liquidator mode is, in essence, a real war.

THE LIQUIDATOR CAN ONLY BE GET RID OF BY PHYSICAL BLOWS

This kind of work resembles actual combat rather than peaceful life, more like an attempt to overcome a severe disability. Only those who are prepared and who hate the built-in genetic enemy of the human species will pass this stage.

PHYSICAL STRIKES SHOULD BE DELIVERED BY MENTAL PRESSURE TO SENSITIVE AREAS IN THE RIGHT HEMISPHERE OF THE BRAIN

The most vulnerable area of the biorobot's consciousness:

The most convenient way to deliver blows is by mentally rotating an imaginary oblong object in the right side of the mind—for example, a stick or a wrench. Trying to hit the sensitive points of the hostile consciousness. The stupid war animal, which resides in the right hemisphere of the brain, if actively interfered with, begins to fight the person and fully exposes itself. The fight can reach a severe state, when the person fully realizes they are fighting a stupid, hostile, aggressive animal embedded in their body. But in this case, questions will never arise again about why insurmountable problems and dead ends persist throughout life, often when literally everything falls apart without any hope of success.

THE MOST EFFECTIVE THING IS TO STRIKE THE BIOROBOT FROM THE RIGHT UP AND BACK TO DISABLE THE LIQUIDATOR'S EXECUTIVE ELEMENT

It may not be possible to achieve success immediately with rotation alone; the need to strike to the right, back, and upward creates additional difficulty, which is awkward. It's also important to start carefully, gradually building to greater success.

FIGHTING A BIOROBOT IS DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH AND LIFE

A raging war animal, almost completely unconscious and being beaten from the inside, can cause severe damage to the body, trigger mental disorders with hallucinations and voices in the head, and even speak and scream loudly through a person's mouth, which the person might not expect. For example, "help," "they're killing me," "I'm sick," and so on. In the most severe situation, if you start fighting abruptly and unexpectedly, a mini-stroke or even a fatal stroke can occur. It's important to be mentally prepared for this.

Therefore, it's best to begin the attacks gradually, without overexerting yourself and mentally preparing yourself for the worst. If severe headaches, dizziness, sudden drowsiness, persistent fatigue, voices and screams in your head, uncontrollable phrases and screams from your mouth begin, be sure to take rest breaks and get enough sleep. It's best to lie down more; if symptoms worsen, take a vacation and rest at home.

DURING THE BATTLE WITH THE BIO-ROBOT, DO NOT WORK HARD; IT IS DANGEROUS TO DRIVE A CAR

A special biorobot mode, in which visual and vocal effects are activated. The biorobot can tell interesting stories reminiscent of horror stories or science fiction. It can also show strange scenes from someone else's life. This can be captivatingly interesting. However, it's important to remember that in this case, the brain is overloaded, leading to poor blood circulation. Combining viewing such scenes and listening to stories with an active, fulfilling life can lead to severe cerebral circulatory failure, especially in the right hemisphere, a mini-stroke, or even a stroke. In this case, extreme caution should be exercised, avoiding overexertion, and getting plenty of rest, especially lying down.

WATCHING SCIENCE FICTION PICTURES AND LISTENING TO STORIES IN YOUR HEAD IS DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH.

After these images and stories, which can continue intermittently for a year or more, the biorobot inevitably goes mad, begins to rave, and interferes. Then it switches to liquidator mode and begins fighting with the person, often with severe consequences for physical and mental health.

Interestingly, the biorobot has a mode where it cries and begs the human not to kill it. Real tears flow from the human's eyes, and pleas flow from its mouth. But these are the hypocritical tears of an utterly immoral criminal. After some time, realizing that this is futile, the biorobot may suddenly switch to enemy mode, and the tears and lamentations will cease. Such a state is never believable, and it hints that such tears and pleas coming from a human may be merely the war mode of its embedded biorobot. It seems as if the other person has sincerely repented of something they did, and it's safe to continue being around them, but it's simply an adaptive reflex. And they may suddenly stop crying and begging, immediately forgetting about their current state.

LET ME REMIND YOU AGAIN, WAR LOOKS LIKE THIS:

War isn't just talk or relaxing. Real war is when things are hard, bad, painful, and when you could be killed at any moment. And all that's left is to fight, perhaps die, win, or surrender to the enemy.

It's important to remember that no one will help a person in such a struggle. Not doctors, not friends, not close relatives. It's often surprising to see how people listen to you about what's happening to you and what you've learned, and then ignore you. Or they unexpectedly react with hostility, trying to silence you. The consciousness of such people is completely controlled by a biorobot. You could say that such people appear normal on the surface, but they themselves consciously want to die, leading everyone else to their doom. In reality, those who are completely incomprehensible are profoundly insane, completely inadequate in certain situations. Unfortunately, they are always the overwhelming majority. But after such incidents, everything becomes crystal clear.

IT IS USELESS TO CONTACT PSYCHIATRY, RELATIVES AND FRIENDS IN SUCH A SITUATION

Psychiatry will make a standard diagnosis, most often schizophrenia. They will begin treatment, prescribing antipsychotics with severe side effects. These may improve the condition, but more often than not, living under the influence of such medications is extremely difficult. In the most severe cases, the biorobot turns into an uncontrollable, aggressive animal that constantly attacks, and this condition will require inpatient treatment.

The question of which method is more effective—physical intervention, as I described above, or official medication—remains controversial. Psychotropic medications provide temporary relief, but do not address the underlying cause. It's also important to remember that severe mental disorders, such as schizophrenia and paranoia, are difficult to treat with medication, or are not treatable at all.

In my experience, conventional sedatives, tranquilizers, and herbal remedies have little effect if a biorobot has entered liquidator mode. Beer has some calming effect. But wine and strong alcoholic drinks, on the contrary, worsen the situation.

When engaging in direct confrontation with a biorobot, one should be prepared for a protracted, difficult battle that could last for several years, literally every day, and consume a significant portion of normal life. But considering how many years this vestige takes from a normal person, causing unexpected, serious, dramatic problems and illnesses, the fight is worth starting and winning.

A BUILT-IN COMBAT BIOROBOT NEVER GIVES UP AND FIGHTS TO THE END. IT IS A STUPID SUICIDE SOLDIER WHO IS ONLY CAPABLE OF CARRYING OUT THE ACTIONS GIVEN BY THE MILITARY GENETIC PROGRAM

It's worth adding to make the picture crystal clear. In combat mode, a war animal hates to the extreme. Sometimes it even howls and growls with hatred right in its head. People usually don't feel this hatred in what they consider normal life. It's a heavy, essentially deadly, genetic hatred of peoples who perished on another planet, who passed it on to us here in our lives, and then left forever, remaining only in memory.

From the author

At the moment, I feel like a cross between Copernicus and Levenhuk. Surprisingly, this is nothing special. Copernicus noticed some inconsistencies in the calculations, after that all knowledge about the universe around us changed radically. Of course, now is not the time when scientists are persecuted for the dissemination of scientific knowledge, but I can imagine what a stream of hatred will fall upon this publication, if it is presented in an explicit form to the public. But Copernicus had at least a faithful student who believed in the teacher and spread this knowledge. I have no one. Maybe, of course, I'm wrong in something, this area has not been investigated at all. But after all, Copernicus was also wrong at first, he believed that the stars were rigidly fixed on spheres that revolve around the Sun. But he gave a powerful impetus to understanding the real structure of our world. For Levenhuk, the situation was a little different. He discovered some microscopic creatures that no one had seen before him, and showed it to everyone, including the Russian Tsar Peter I. But this was not particularly interesting to anyone. Then, for 150 years, no one assumed that this could be a source of terrible diseases. Everyone continued to hurt and die. Tsar Peter I was dying in terrible agony from a urinary tract infection, and he screamed in pain so loudly that he was heard by passers-by on the street. But because everyone did not care. Only with the discoveries of Pasteur and Koch at the end of the 19th century was it finally possible to find a source of epidemics and contagious diseases. But at least they listened to Levenhuk! He turned to the Academy of Sciences, and there they read what he wrote. They even sent a commission to investigate the facts. As a result, his name remained in history. He also gave impetus to the study of the world of simple living things.

I am now well aware of the benefits that a detailed examination of the results of my research could bring. If you somehow turn off this stupid enemy of total degradation, using CRISP technology or simply by eliminating his nerve node with an electric shock, we will not only be able to say goodbye to many considered mysterious diseases that are difficult or impossible to cure. For example, such as schizophrenia, depression, psychosis, allergies, irritable bowel syndrome, hypertension, encephalopathy and many others. But it will also be possible to free civilization from the terrible shackles of its development. She will instantly breathe freely, begin to rapidly rush forward, will build fair relationships where everyone can live happily. Most likely, there will be no more crises, poverty, hunger, total hatred and wars. In family and love, it will be possible to build fair and full-fledged relationships leading to personal happiness and, ultimately, everyone's full surrender for the good of all humanity.

You think I didn't try to reach anyone with this information? Not half! I have tried! But humanity was not curious. Those to whom I tried to tell this either immediately were terribly cowardly and did not want to read, or did not attach any importance to this. Naturally, I tried to reach out to science. I wrote to the journal Science and Life, to the Russian Society of Psychiatrists, to several addressees, to the Russian Academy of Sciences, to academicians. I did not immediately describe the results of my research, I simply reported that I had important information, and offered to share it. The result was: no answer or no answer after reading the submitted material. I even wrote to the famous astronomer Dmitry Vibe. He is telling us from a wide rostrum that aliens will not fly, UFOs are some kind of nonsense, he himself saw UFOs, but it seems to him not interesting. I told him that there are interesting facts about aliens, he limited himself to a couple of standard notifications, but did not want to get acquainted with the information. Apparently, it is not at all interesting for an astronomer to know about aliens.

In the end, I personally approached the president of the Russian Academy of Sciences, academician Alexander Sergeyev, with a request to find someone to whom this data could be transmitted. The result is the same, they simply ignored me.

There is no single mailbox in the RAS for letters from ordinary citizens. Why do scientists need to know our opinion? It's just not possible to reach modern science! Science is not interested in anything now. Even if I bring the Great Opening to scientists now, for which they personally will immediately be given the Nobel Prize, they will not want to listen. As I already guess, in Russia there is simply no science! A scientist who is not interested in new information, who does not seek to learn anything, is no longer a scientist. This is a functionary or office employee. Russian science now is a fiction! But the true state of affairs in Russian science was very vitally described to me by one doctor of biological sciences. I then answered him right away: it's a corpse, you live there in the miasma of a corpse!

Desperate to find understanding in Russia, I wrote a letter to Scientific American magazine. The same result, they did not answer me. They also do not have a mailing address for readers, only for commercial offers. It seems that the position of science in the United States is no better than in Russia, as well as throughout the world.

After that I decided to write to all the academies of sciences in developed countries.

Applied to the British Academy of Sciences (www.thebritishacademy.ac.uk), President Sir David Cannadine. No answer.

Sent a letter to the French Academy of Sciences (www.academie-sciences.fr), President Monsieur Pierre Corvol. Vice President Monsieur Patrick Flandrin, Secretary of Monsieur Étienne Ghys, and the Academy Secretariat. No answer.

Wrote to the Union of German Academies of Sciences and Humanities (www.akademienunion.de), President Professor Hanns Hatt, Vice President Professor Thomas O. Höllmann, Vice President Edwin J. Kreuzer, and the Secretariat. Zero reaction.

I sent letters to the American National Academy of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine (www.nationalacademies.org), at three different addresses. No reaction. I also sent it to the American National Academy of Arts and Sciences (www.amacad.org), which is a separate organization. It's already funny.

Sent to the Spanish Royal Academy of Sciences (rac.es). Who would have doubted, there is no answer.

Sent to the Italian National Academy dei Lincei (www.lincci.it). Same.

Submitted to the Royal Danish Academy of Sciences (www.royalacademy.dk). No result.

Sent to the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences (www.knaw.nl). The mailing address given on the site gives a delivery error.

Applied to the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences (www.kva.se). You can guess what happened.

Sent to the Norwegian Academy of Sciences (www.dnva.no). Silence.

Sent to the Academy of Finland (www.aka.fi). Nothing.

Sent to the Royal Society of Canada (rsc-src.ca). No answer.

Sent to the Chinese Academy of Sciences (english.cas.cn). The same result.

I also tried to write to the psychiatric community, hoping to find understanding there. I wrote to the Russian Society of Psychiatrists, only one doctor answered, received the text and went out.

I tried to contact the University of Cambridge, previously known for its scandalous research on the paranormal. It seems to the address. It didn't work! Of all the doctors and professors to whom I wrote, no one answered. I managed to get through to one student, and then, at that time he had already stopped studying at the university, the postal address remained. But he, too, received information and fell silent. What can I say, Cambridge is not the same ...

The answer to this riddle is simple. People who sit in the institutions described have nothing to do with science! These are all zits-chairmen of the offices of the well-known type "Horns and Hooves", who are only interested in financial investments in their bullshit research. Nothing interests them anymore! It's a paradox, but if you suddenly discover real cold thermonuclear fusion at home, you won't be able to interest this "science" in any way. It's just that no one will react! As I understand it, they are already not interested in the Nobel Prize, they are only interested in investments from fools. How can this be called science?

But this is not the worst. My understanding is growing that the scientific community already presents us with a picture of the world, far from reality, born only in their fantasies and in mathematical calculations. These theories have become infinitely complex, filled with difficult to understand formulas, and ordinary people do not even try to delve into them. And the idea is imposed on them that science now knows everything and is moving forward with leaps and bounds. In fact, these scientists are doing things somehow, leaving well-marked inconsistencies and gaping holes in their writings. As I understand it, the calculation is made that no one will understand this complex material and will not notice these inconsistencies. Therefore, modern science immediately begins to yell wildly when you try to criticize it with argument. It is designed for gullible people who listen with an open mouth and ask only convenient questions. Essentially, modern science cannot answer fundamentally complex questions! Immediately hatred, bias, accusations of pseudoscience, demagoguery. As I understand it, sooner or later, with such an attitude, it will come to a complete standstill, and will simply depict activity, completely inventing the results, handing out awards to each other. The main thing is that no one guesses about anything.

It so happened that in a strange way I found the answer to a question that seems to excite humanity. We are not alone in the universe! That's for sure. The Fermi paradox no longer exists for me. Now I am sure that aliens visited the Earth, maybe more recently. Who they were is hard to say. Most likely they were not like us. But it is entirely possible that the UFOs were partly alien aircraft that simply tracked what happened to the civilization of people on Earth. But a strange thing. The whole world is already equipped with smartphones with cameras, it seems that UFO messages with photos and videos should appear everywhere all the time, but they are not! Only falsifications.

But the most disgusting thing of all, as I understand, is that most representatives of humanity are not interested in anything except the established rules of their own mercantile benefit. It seems that everything I have written here should be fantastically interesting! A real other planet, completely different from ours, the ancestral home of humanity, a real alien civilization, information about which can be obtained literally without leaving home! And after this, a lot of questions arise, to which any real scientist would be ready to search for answers all his life. For example, why on another planet did everything turn out exactly this way, which led to a tragic end? Is the history of that planet to blame, the relationships of the peoples who inhabited it in the last period, or was the situation there much worse, when the inhabitants could correct something at home, very insignificantly, the rest came to them from somewhere in such an ugly form? From the information I received, this is not clear. Why does our Earth have such a strange history? Why were there no truly intelligent species here before people, only plants and animals? What happened on that planet and then all these billions of years from the origin of life on Earth? What actually caused the mass extinctions of species? Were they natural disasters or were they artificial? What did the mechanism that arranged the evolutionary leaps on Earth look like? What was happening at that moment on another planet and then? Who designed all this? Some things are really incomprehensible. Why make, for example, mosquitoes or poisonous reptiles? What was the point? Or was it entertainment for creatures unknown to us with a psychology completely alien to us? How did all this get to us on Earth, overcoming perhaps tens of light years? Just moving in space? Or did everything look completely different? This is interesting!

But no! We had to sit for the last hundred and fifty years and stubbornly convince ourselves that evolution on Earth occurred naturally. Stubbornly ignoring all criticism and obvious inconsistencies. Life supposedly appeared on its own and then became more complex on its own, as if there was some kind of physical law that explains this! And even the lack of serious objective evidence has never bothered anyone. It turns out that everything is based on random mutations, of which we see pitifully few in nature around us. The ability of existing species to independently variability turned out to be greatly exaggerated, and their adaptability to changes in living conditions is completely non-existent; with the development of human activity on the planet, the number of species is rapidly decreasing every year. And that very evolution is not visible.

And this has been said many times, but it turned out to be useless to argue with smug fools. The paradox is that in this research I actually outstripped modern science by probably centuries, but it turned out that no one was interested in it! So, if discoveries are not interesting, then there are no more real scientists. And humanity on Earth has slid in social psychology somewhere to pre-ancient times.

When I was a schoolboy, I dreamed of building a starship and traveling to distant constellations. At that time, it seemed quite realistic. Then a planetship to fly to the satellites of Jupiter and beyond. But it turned out that everything that had been achieved by humanity at that time was then mercilessly thrown out and forgotten. Only memories remained. It turned out that a genetic war came from space and killed all of this, turning the overwhelming majority of people of the Homo Sapiens species into literally animals with the most primitive interests.

Now I see the climate changing, getting hotter due to the greenhouse effect caused by human activity, thousands of species of plants and animals disappearing. And if the next generations will rapidly die out because they turned their own planet into a garbage dump, or kill everyone here with nuclear weapons, I will not be surprised. It means that humanity has become such that it fully deserves it.
